Kennedy Off To Report to Roosevelt on Trade Treaty

Norman Davis in London Trying to Breathe Life Into Negotiations.

Rumor Has Envoy In Treasury Post

Commons Urged to Woo U. S., 'Greatest Storehouse in World.'

By Joseph Driscoll.

London, June 15—American Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy sailed today from Southampton on the Queen Mary to report to President Roosevelt on the prospects, not so bright now, for a successful conclusion of the Anglo-American negotiations for a trade pact and lower tariff walls which would contribute to world appeasement.

Settlement of Britain's war debt to the United States might follow the signature of a trade treaty.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt's former Ambassador at Large, Norman H. Davis, is here to urge upon his British friends the supreme importance, as he sees it, of saving the Anglo-American negotiations from deadlock and failure. Davis arrived in London this week.

Kennedy May Stay.

One of Britain's leading advocates of Anglo-American partnership, Lord Stamp, of Shortlands, a director of the Bank of England, has been in the United States, and, according to one report in the local press, may have conferred with American Treasury officials about settling Britain's war debt. The semiannual payment was defaulted today.

[Kennedy said yesterday that he was returning home to see his son graduated from Harvard.—Editor's note.]

[Ambassador Kennedy is expected to continue as American envoy to the Court of St. James's unless he is offered a higher post in the Roosevelt Administration. It is understood that the President is considering Kennedy as Secretary of the Treasury to succeed Henry Morgenthau, should the latter resign.

Pact Urged in Commons.

When Kennedy came to London it was assumed he wanted to stay a year at the post. However, he has made a fine start in his diplomatic career and is now willing to live and work over here as long as he can be of real service. As a businessman, he is interested naturally in such matters as trade pacts and debt settlements.

Gold Prices Boom In London Market

London, June 15 (U.P.).—Demand for gold continued heavy in the London market today from hoarders in Continental Europe and from Bombay speculators, as rumors persisted, despite Washington denials that the United States planned further devaluation of the dollar.

A total of £1,773,000 ($8,823,866) in gold was turned over, the largest amount since June of last year. The price rose to an American equivalent of $35.02 per fine ounce, or a 2 cent premium over the American gold buying price. That was a jump of 10 cents over yesterday's price.

Hungary Makes Debt Payment To United States

Hungary took her place beside Finland yesterday as the only other nation to pay something on its debt to the United States.

Finland delivered to the Treasury the entire amount due as her semi-annual installment—$161,935.50, while Hungary made a token payment of $9,828.16 on her total obligation of $2,340,000.

JOHN PELENYI.

The Hungarian government was praised for its action by Secretary Hull, who, at his press conference, expressed gratification that Hungary was undertaking to meet her obligation to this extent.

The State Department received the Hungarian check, submitted by Minister John Pelenyi, despite failure of Congress to date to take any action on Hungary's proposal for refunding of her relief debt to this country. The proposal was submitted to Congress by President Roosevelt March 28.

Spain's Rebels Wreck 4 More Foreign Ships

Two British, Two French Vessels Bombed; Castellon Capital Falls.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid June 15.—Insurgent air raiders today wrecked four more foreign ships, including two British vessels, in a terrific onslaught on Valencia Harbor and the eastern seaboard, where refugees were streaming south.

Five bombing raids on Valencia left 3 known dead and 20 injured.

Prime Minister Chamberlain told the British House of Commons yesterday that Britain, fearful of war, would take no retaliatory action against the repeated bombings and sinkings of British ships in loyalist ports.

Franco's bombs again found a target in the British freighter Thurston, leaving the ship in flames at her dock. The Thurston, last bombed June 7, was believed lost tonight.

The 5,625-ton British steamer Seapharer was holed below the waterline and was sinking slowly.

Lloyd's reports from Marseille said the 1,235-ton British steamer Lucky had been bombed and sunk in the Mediterranean.

Two French vessels also were victims of the Valencia raids. The freighter Gaulois was sunk and a sailing vessel set afire.

Clouds of smoke billowed from Valencia's bomb-punished harbor section and from residential areas as incendiary missiles struck. Many houses were burned to the ground when repeated attacks kept firemen away.

Government dispatches from Valencia said insurgent warships bombed the coastal highway to captured Castellon de la Plana during the day as refugees struggled southward.

It was estimated 28,000 refugees from Castellon Province had poured into Valencia, where living facilities were taxed to the utmost and efforts were made to move many of them into less exposed sections farther south.

At Castellon de la Plana only 11,000 of the normal 40,000 population remained to see Gen. Franco's victorious soldiery sweep in.

Short on food for many days, they grabbed hungrily today at loaves of bread brought into the city in truck-

Stormtroops Order All From Berlin Theaters and Raid Cafes.

Consulates of Britain, America Besieged by Persecuted.

By the United Press.

Berlin, June 15.—Nazi storm troopers participated for the first time tonight in renewed anti-Semitic activity when they entered two theaters along the Kurfuerstendamm, in Berlin's West End, and ordered all Jews in the audience to leave.

The uniformed storm troopers directed the managers of the motion picture houses to switch on the auditorium lights and then ordered any Jews to leave immediately.

Flying squads of police at the same time raided one of the cafes most frequented by Jews and arrested several. The police raided another cafe around the corner a short time later.

Consulates Besieged.

German Jews, meanwhile, besieged the American and British consulates, seeking escape from the country, as reports spread of 1,000 or more arrests in one of the most intense anti-Jewish drives since the "April Fool's Day" purge of 1933.

The reasons underlying the new anti-Semitic wave were obscure, but Nazi officials did not deny that activities against Jews in Berlin and the provinces had been intensified and that arrests were being made.

One party leader said the Jews had brought renewal of the activities upon themselves by opposing Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering's decree designed to take business affairs out of their hands.

To "Aryanize" all Shops.

Informed quarters said the government intended to "Aryanize" all Jewish-owned stores and shops by the end of July.

This program, if carried out, was expected by many observers to be the decisive phase of the Nazi-Jewish problem in Germany.

The new campaign extended, however, not only to stores and shops but to schools and other categories of Jewish life and in many respects followed the recent Jewish "purge" in Austria.

The newspaper "Der Stuermer," edited by Julius Streicher, mentioned a case in Hirschberg where a Nazi court sentenced Adolf Kinsky, a Jew, to 12 years' imprisonment and castration for assaulting a young Aryan girl, and demanded the castration of all Jews found guilty of "race pollution."

As a result of the anti-Jewish wave in Berlin, it was widely believed that even more stringent decrees might be forthcoming to eliminate Jews from German business life.

Flood, Cholera Ravage China; Epidemic Raging in Shanghai

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Thursday), June 16.—Flood and cholera dangers mounted today in China, where peasant millions already were suffering from 11 months of warfare.

Rising flood waters in the Yellow River surged 50 miles south of disastrous breaks in dikes near Chengchow, central China's rail and military crossroads.

Far from the war and flood fronts, the Shankhai municipal council officially declared cholera to be epidemic in Shanghai. In the city's hospitals there were 123 cases, 73 originating in foreign-administered areas.

On the northern Shantung province coast the British steamer Shuntien was quarantined at Chefoo after a cholera death aboard. Eight Chinese died of cholera in Japanese-occupied Soochow, 50 miles west of here.

To block spread of the disease to Japan, the Japanese consulate-general ceased issuing bills of health to vessels proceeding from Shanghai to Japanese ports.

(Dispatches from Lucknow, India, in the area which in years past has been a starting-point of epidemics, said cholera had taken 12,000 lives in the past seven weeks in the United Provinces.)

In flood-menaced areas, Japanese engineers said their previous statements that 150,000 Chinese had been drowned should be revised downward considerably. Communica-

2d No-Hit Game By Vander Meer; Almada Traded

National and Washington baseball fans have a lot of fat to chew today.

The first morsel, a history-making feat in big-time baseball, was the second consecutive no-hit, no-run game hurled by Johnny Vander Meer, 23, last night to give the Cincinnati Reds a 6-0 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers. Vander Meer, who was the sensation of the Piedmont League just a few months ago, pitched the Reds to a no-hit victory over Boston Saturday.

VANDER MEER

The second piece was the trade of Melo Almada, 23-year-old Mexican centerfielder picked up by the Nats with the Ferrell brothers a year ago, to the St. Louis Browns for Sammy West, 34, also a centerfielder. Almada is batting .244, as compared with West's .320. The trade was made just a few minutes before the June 15 trading deadline. No pitchers were acquired by the Nats.

McCall Judged Guilty, Faces Electrocution

To Be Sentenced Today; Says $10,000 Visions Tempted Him.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., June 15.—Franklin Pierce McCall, 21-year-old truck driver, was formally adjudged guilty today of kidnaping James Bailey Cash, jr.—a crime punishable by death.

Circuit Judge H. F. Atkinson deferred sentence until tomorrow at request of defense counsel.

Court attaches said tonight it was understood Judge Atkinson considered a death sentence mandatory.

Florida provides electrocution for ransom kidnaping unless a jury recommends life imprisonment. There was no jury because McCall pleaded guilty of abduction at a preliminary hearing yesterday.

McCall, a minister's son, was the only defense witness. The State based its case on testimony of Federal agents and identification by Mr. and Mrs. James Bailey Cash, sr., of pajamas found on the child's decomposed body 12 days after he disappeared May 28.

McCall explained he was tempted by visions of the $10,000 ransom. He made no effort to repudiate a 10-page confession introduced by the State.

In a firm but low voice, he gave the following account of the crime:

"About 9:30 I went to the home of Hal McLaughlin and then went to J. B. Cash's filling station and saw Mr. and Mrs. Cash inside the store. I asked the time and Mrs. Cash said, 'It's 9:30—time for you to be home in bed.'

"I left the store and went through an alley in back to the filling station and came through the back door of the house. It was locked and I cut the screen with a knife.

J. Edgar Hoover, Aide Injured in Auto Crash Here

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and Clyde Tolson, assistant director, received slight bruises in an accident at Seventeenth street and Constitution avenue yesterday.

They had arrived at the airport from New York at 5:20 p. m. and were driving to the office when an oil truck rammed the rear of their sedan while it was waiting for a traffic light.

The impact shoved Hoover's car into one driven by Mrs. Rae Peterson, of 1250 Tenth street northwest, knocking it into the intersection. She was unhurt. The rear of both cars was damaged.

Judge Bars Mrs. Landis' Last Words

Nurse Admits Receiving Gems, Favors; Denies Knowing Him Wed.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Because a Casualty Hospital physician "didn't have nerve enough" to tell Blanche Gertrude Landis she was going to die, a deathbed statement purporting to accuse her young husband, James L. (Jimmy) Landis, now on trial for her murder, was withheld yesterday from a District Court jury.

Dr. James Braden, resident physician at Casualty, took the stand to relate a bedside conversation he had with Mrs. Landis after she regained consciousness the day after her brutal beating on March 24.

He said she had been conscious about 15 minutes and, despite a gaping hole in her skull and multiple lacerations over her face, recognized him as a doctor, knew where she was and recalled what had happened.

Defense Objects.

"I went into the room and said: Blanche, you are in a dangerous condition and may die," Dr. Braden testified.

Pressed for the woman's reply by Assistant United States Attorney Cecil Heflin, the physician was about to respond when Defense Attorney Russell Kelly objected.

A consultation at the bench of Justice Jesse Adkins followed. A moment later, the judge turned to Dr. Braden and asked:

"Were you sure this woman was going to die?"

"That was my judgment, yes."

"Then why didn't you tell her so definitely instead of saying she might die?"

"That's a hard thing to do—I didn't have nerve enough."

When it became apparent that Justice Adkins was going to sustain Kelly's objection to the purported statement from Mrs. Landis, Prosecutor Heflin withdrew his witness and excused Dr. Braden from further testimony. Had the doctor definitely told his patient she was going to die, Heflin later explained, the statement probably would have been admitted.

It was understood, however, that Mrs. Landis, after hearing she had little chance to survive the beating, told Dr. Braden:

"Bring Jimmy in here and show him what he did."

Detective Heard It.

This statement, believed to have been her last words, was introduced in testimony before a coroner's jury last March and was said to have been made in the presence of Detective Sergt. John Wise.

Throughout the prosecution's efforts to place this damaging evidence before the jury yesterday, young Landis, one-time rookie fireman, sat pale and tense between Kelly and his codefense counsel, Jean Boardman. He repeatedly moistened his lips and swallowed.

Moscow Ousts 7 Retail Heads for Poor Distribution

Moscow, June 15 (AP).—Seven heads of the retail trade department were ousted today because housewives too frequently found it impossible to buy the kind of socks and bread they wanted.

They were held responsible for various deficiencies in stores and markets supplied by the commissariat for home trade—the failure of shops to get ordinary stocks, hitches in the bread supply, furnishing spoiled fruits to retailers, and keeping insufficient restaurants open.

A prospective customer, for example, canvassed Moscow establishments one day recently without finding any men's hose. Shelves for cotton goods and other products most in demand were frequently empty.

The shakeup follows appointment of a special textile sales department to bring order into the manufacture and distribution of cloth.

House Smothers Veto; Recess Delayed Again; Wire-Tapping Upheld

Amendment Legalizing Information Passed by Lower Chamber.

Supreme Court's Ruling Recalled

Action Amends Clause on Which Decision Was Based.

The House yesterday passed without debate an amendment to the communications act legalizing wire tapping and radio interception by law enforcement agents.

The bill amends the clause on which the Supreme Court's decision, in the case of Nardone vs. the United States, barring evidence so obtained from Federal courts, was based.

It provides that whenever the head of an executive department or independent establishment of the Government "reasonably believes that a violation of any criminal law . . ." in his jurisdiction is afoot "through a gang, confederacy or group of two or more persons," he may order evidence to be procured by tapping wires or intercepting radio messages.

The bill not only nullifies the effect of the Nardone case decision in future cases, but provides that if intercepted communications reveal commission of a crime other than that under investigation or by persons other than those named as suspects, any evidence obtained will be available for use in the prosecution of such crimes.

Goes Back to Senate.

The bill previously had passed the Senate, but must be returned for concurrence in minor House amendments. In its report on the bill, the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce indicated it had the approval of President Roosevelt.

With possession of numbers slips made illegal by a previous act of Congress, yesterday's amendment was seen here as placing in the hands of District police a powerful weapon against gambling. The telephone has become the chief medium of contact between operators and players in the face of the numbers law.

Indictments against numerous alleged operators here have been nolle prossed since the Nardone ruling, and United States Attorney David A. Pine last night said no such indictments were pending. He expressed the belief the new amendment would enable authorities to reach the big shots in Washington gambling.

Crippled Cases Dropped.

Wire-tapping by Federal officers to obtain evidence was outlawed by the Supreme Court on December 20, 1937, when it reversed in a 7-2 decision convictions of four men held in New York for smuggling alcohol. They were Frank C. Nardone, Austin L. Callahan, Hugh Brown and Robert Gottfried. Nardone was sentenced to three years and the others to a year and a half on evidence obtained when Federal agents tapped their telephone wires.

This decision followed a 1928 ruling of the court that wire-tapping for evidence was not in violation of the fourth amendment to the Constitution. In the Nardone case, the court held the Federal communications act of 1934 in itself outlawed such methods of seeking evidence.

District authorities announced the day after the decision, through for-

House Speaker Rebuffs Lewis On Walsh Act

Bankhead Turns Deaf Ear to Demand for Floor Vote on Amendment.

Speaker Bankhead flatly rebuffed John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, when Lewis yesterday demanded that the Speaker waive the House rules to permit a floor vote on the bill amending the Walsh-Healey Government-contracts act.

With the drastic measure bottled up in the House Rules Committee, Lewis sought to have the Speaker recognize a member from the floor in order to get the measure before the House.

Bankhead said he was disinclined to do so, since two House committees—Judiciary and Rules—had objected to phases of the bill and "since some members of the House who are devoted to labor advised me that at this stage of the game and in view of the circumstances it would be unwise to attempt to pass this amendment."

Senators Assure Tidal Basin Site for Jefferson Memorial

By James D. Secrest.

Construction of the John Russell Pope design for a Thomas Jefferson Memorial on the banks of the Tidal Basin was assured yesterday as the Senate approved an initial appropriation of $500,000, and rejected a motion to reopen the issue for further study.

An overwhelming negative voice vote concluded the controversy, which has raged more than a year over the plan of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission. The vote was on a motion by Senator Green (Republican), of Rhode Island, to require Fine Arts Commission approval of any design selected.

After approving the memorial appropriation, the Senate proceeded to pass upon other amendments to the last deficiency bill, and sent the measure to conference. Included in the appropriations were funds to start a local Government construction program calling for eventual expenditures of $28,000,000.

Major projects are:

An addition to the Navy Department Building, costing $210,000.

Completion of the naval testing basin in Maryland at a cost of $500,000.

Improvements costing $1,565,000 at Washington Navy Yard.

Congress Slated To Quit Tonight

(Text of Veto Message—Page 11)

By Robert C. Albright.

A second false start toward Congressional adjournment was ended abruptly last night in a conference tie-up on the last minor addition to the session's $9,380,000,000 appropriation record.

Snagging a "sine-die" take-off was the $279,000,000 House second deficiency bill, increased to $289,000,000 by the Senate. A conference was called for this morning on the Senate's $10,000,000 increase.

A belated Presidential veto message on the two-year extension of the emergency 3½ per cent Federal land-bank interest rate hardly rippled the drab routine of the day.

The House promptly romped over the veto by a 244-to-87 roll-call vote. Both House and Senate had done the same thing a year ago, and the Senate is expected to repeat the performance today.

Adjournment hopes rose briefly with collapse of the short-lived filibuster on the $375,000,000 flood-control bill and tottered higher as the Senate passed the deficiency bill by a voice vote. But pressure of work on overburdened appropriations conferees forced another delay.

Action Set for Today.

Conference action on the deficiency bill was postponed until today, when the same conferees were called into session at 5 p. m. on the disputed $212,000,000 farm parity price section of the $3,753,000,000 spending-lending bill. The Senate quit for the day at 5:30 p. m. and the House followed suit at 5:45.

Relief bill conferees quickly agreed to accept the House formula for distribution of the parity payments. This would give $83,000,000 to cotton farmers; $65,000,000 to corn growers, and $60,000,000 to wheat raisers. The Senate conferees asked for a separate vote in the Senate today on the $500,000 cut in REA administrative expenses.

With major obstacles brushed aside, Senate Majority Leader Barkley predicted final adjournment "before nightfall" today.

The dramatic last-minute filibuster against vast Federal power and waterway controls provided in the flood-control bill broke in midafternoon as abruptly as it had begun the night before.

Report Approved, 51-32.

Following a parting warning from Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, that "you are reducing sovereign States to dependencies of the Federal Government," the Senate called the roll on the flood control conference report and approved it 51 to 32.

Barkley immediately put forward the controversial deficiency measure, which had been laid aside in the heat of Tuesday night's debate after more than $6,000,000 in Senate amendments had been added to the bill. It was passed by a voice vote.

The bill carries among other items $500,000 to administer the wage-hour law and a $36,314,083 start on the naval expansion program.

Adjournment-end visitors were packing the galleries when word of the President's farm interest veto reached the Senate. Both houses still pressed forward with leaders less hopeful for a getaway.

Then came the announcement from Chairman Adams, of the Senate Deficiency sub-committee, that it was mechanically impossible for conferees to complete action on both the farm parity amendment and the Politics Blamed For Recession By Advertisers

Arnold, However, Throws Slump Guilt Upon Monopolies.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, June 15.—The Advertising Federation of America, at the close of its convention here today, called political interference in business a major cause of the recession.

A resolution adopted by the federation blamed such interference for "creating uncertainty, disturbing the morale of the people, hampering and discouraging business leaders, burdening trade, and throttling the volume of trade."

Earlier today, Thurman Arnold, who heads the antitrust division of the United States Department of Justice, told the delegates that high prices, artificially maintained by monopolies, were responsible for much of the current unemployment.

Sharing the program with the Assistant Attorney General were Roy S. Durstine, New York advertising man, who said that business must tell its virtues to the public, and Mrs. Bert W. Hendrickson, of New York, who warned advertisers that women now are "doing their own thinking."

Arnold Waives Morals.

Arnold said that violations of antitrust laws by industrialists did not necessarily involve moral turpitude.

"It is more like passing through a traffic light at high speed without the intention of hurting any one," he said. "This makes it less immoral, but not less dangerous.

"We are going through a period in which most of our industrial pressures are in the direction of maintaining prices which there is no purchasing power to support, and then cutting down production and creating unemployment.

"The price of steel for building supplies is $7 a ton higher in the midst of the present recession than it was in 1929 and the industry is operating today at 25 per cent of capacity. . . . the price of aluminum has not declined in proportion with the combined wholesale index."

"Truth" Called For.

Mrs. Hendrickson, chairman of consumer interests for next year's New York World's Fair, advocated "the simple truth" in advertising to "overcome suspicion and regain public confidence."

Durstine, president of Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborn, Inc., said that advertising can combat the impression that "social justice is something which always must be wrung from the reluctant hands of industry."

The delegates re-elected George M. Slocum, publisher of Automotive News, Detroit, as president of the federation. Norman S. Rose, advertising manager of the Christian Science Daily Monitor, Boston, was elected secretary. He was formerly vice president. May O. Vander Pyl, of Detroit, was named secretary, and Mason Britton, of New York, was re-elected chairman of the board of directors. Charles E. Murphy, New York, was re-elected general counsel.

Joseph H. Appel, of New York, was named chairman of a new advisory committee consisting of O. C. Harn, Chicago; Miss Louise Grace, Detroit; Frank A. Black, Boston; Frank Huntress, San Antonio, Tex., and William H. Hodge, Chicago.

Detroit, June 15 (AP).—The Newspaper Advertising Executives' Association re-elected Col. Leroy W. Herron, advertising director of the Washington Star, president today at the conclusion of its three-day convention, held along with that of the Advertising Federation of America.

Forest B. Geneva, of the Des Moines Register-Tribune, was elected vice president, and Irving G. Buntman, of Wisconsin Newspapers, was retained as secretary-treasurer. Chester M. Campbell, of the Chicago Tribune, and Buell W. Hudson, of the Woonsocket (R. I.) Call, were named directors for three-year terms.

Meyer Pledges The Post Anew To Best Interests of the People

Advertising Club Luncheon Honors Publisher on Fifth Anniversary as Paper's Head; Continued Improvement Offered as Goal.

Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post, speaking at a testimonial dinner yesterday tendered him by the Advertising Club of Washington on the occasion of The Post's fifth anniversary under the present management, pledged anew the aim and purpose of this newspaper made five years ago.

"It will be the aim and purpose steadily to improve The Post and make it an even better newspaper than it has been in the past," he said. "It will be conducted as an independent paper devoted to the best interests of the people of Washington and vicinity, and hopes to have their interest and support."

Meyer spoke to more than 150 members of the Advertising Club, who gathered in the Pall Mall room of the Raleigh Hotel for the luncheon. His chief remarks were broadcast over Radio Station WJSV.

Chef Presents Cake.

Alvin Q. Ehrlich, president of the club, introduced the publisher, stating, "The Advertising Club of Washington is pleased in joining the celebration of the fifth year of ownership of The Post by Mr. Meyer."

A 60-pound birthday cake bedecked with five candles was the contribution of Head Pastry Chef Joseph Tucci, who amid acclaim presented the cake to Meyer.

Felix Morley, editor of The Post, told the group Meyer purchased the paper with the idea of "doing real and unique service for the members of the community and the Nation at large."

"Mr. Meyer has been building slowly, but has gone a long way since the first day he took over the newspaper. He bought the paper to do an honest job in an honest way," he said.

Circulation Gains Noted.

Morley pointed out The Post had advanced from fifth position in circulation to third place in the five years among the five Washington newspapers. In advertising, The Post now occupies second place, as compared with fifth place when Meyer bought the paper.

Morley praised the publisher, saying he never dictated the type or method of treating editorials.

"Occasionally Mr. Meyer takes part in our editorial conferences, but he has never attempted to influence our editorials," Morley stated.

Meyer has at all times appreciated the responsibility vested in him in his capacity of a newspaper publisher, Morley said.

Cites Growing Prestige.

"The reputation of The Post, under Mr. Meyer, has increased tremendously throughout the Nation," he stated. "Our cartoons and editorials are reprinted in many other newspapers."

Alexander F. Jones, managing editor, said in the past five years Meyer has been slowly acquiring better features for The Post, and this week on the occasion of the fifth anniversary has added 15 new features, including the columns of Walter Lippman, Mark Sullivan, Dorothy Thompson and a new cable service.

Donald M. Bernard, business manager of The Post, and recently elected member of the board of directors of the club, said progress of a newspaper may be measured by the sincerity of the publisher.

Standards Maintained.

"In this connection Mr. Meyer, throughout the years that I have been associated with The Post, has never once failed to live up to every accepted standard in the newspaper industry."

Among the guests were the Rev. Abram Simon, rabbi of the Washington Hebrew Congregation; Walter Barkdull, display director of the Washington Herald-Times; Howard Parrish, sales director of the Washington Herald-Times; Charles C. Senators Vote $500,000 for Start on Shrine

Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas.

The House construction items—$3,000,000 to start a new War Department building and $3,000,000 to start a new Social Security and Railroad Retirement Board building—were stricken from the bill by the Senate Appropriations Committee. However, they may be restored in conference.

Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, routed the opposition to the Jefferson Memorial appropriation with a few thrusts at critics of the commission and the Pope design.

"It's an unutterable shame," he said, "that for 150 years there has been no memorial here to the man who wrote the Declaration of Independence."

Criticized by King.

Glass recited the history of the commission and its investigations and defended Pope as "the greatest architect of this age."

The plan was criticized by Senator King (Democrta), of Utah, on the ground it did not have the approval of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. He also charged the plan did not have the approval of Charles Moore, former chairman of the Fine Arts Commission, regardless of statements to the contrary.

The commission's choice was defended by Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, who at one time was critical of the Tidal Basin site.

He declared all agencies were agreed on the site chosen on the southeast side of the Tidal Basin and that the only issue was an architectural controversy over Pope's pantheon design.

"The only question is whether the memorial should be built with a top or without one," he said.

The Pope plan calls for a marble-domed structure inside which would be a statue of Jefferson. The authorized cost is $3,000,000.

The appropriation brings to fruition the work of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission appointed four years ago as a bipartisan body. While there were rumblings of disagreement previously, the discord did not become a national controversy until the commission proposed its original plan a year ago.

That plan called for destruction of the Japanese cherry trees bordering the Tidal Basin and for construction of the memorial within the basin. The House withheld a recommended $500,000 appropriation.

This year the commission modified its plan, both as to structure and site, moving the memorial to the banks and preserving the cherry trees.

Voted by Both Chambers.

While the last deficiency appropritaion measure was in conference last night there was no chance of any further legislative change on the memorial, as the item of $500,000 has been appropriated by both the House and Senate.

The Senate made only two amendments to the $915,000 appropriations for the District government before sending the bill to conference.

Upon the motion of Senator King, additional funds for the Juvenile Court were reduced by $10,000 to $33,500. King insisted that the latter would be adequate.

Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, who was handling the bill, added $5,650 for administration of the new zone act just passed by Congress.

31,819,000 on U.S. Farms.

The Agriculture Department reported yesterday the Nation's farm population on January 1 was the largest since 1910. It was estimated at 31,819,000 or 90,000 greater than a year ago.

Park Bill Offered.

Representative May (Democrat), of Kentucky, introduced a bill in Congress yesterday to add 977 acres of the Front Royal depot military reservation to the Shenandoah Park.

Rep. Rankin and Sen. Bulkley Try to Get Relief Funds for Flood Control in Their States.

A drive to have the President allot up to $300,000,000 of relief funds for flood control projects was begun yesterday by Representative Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi. He declared he would urge funds "for construction of dams to control floods, . . . and develop hydroelectric power." The projects are those in the flood control bill sent to the White House yesterday, which carried merely authorizations.

RANKIN.

Senator Bulkley (Democrat), of Ohio, said, according to the Associated Press, that he would seek relief funds for projects in the Ohio River basin.

A rush of Senate confirmations yesterday gave Basil Manly, Federal Power Commissioner, another term in that office, to run until June 22, 1943. In addition, Presidential nominations of more than 600 postmasters were confirmed.

The Ute Indians lost 8,000 acres of land recently restored to them, as well as other big tracts whose return was said to have been contemplated, through Congressional action. The House sent to the White House legislation which Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, said would "prevent the Interior Department from giving vast tracts of western Colorado land back to the Utes."

"These lands were ceded to the Federal Government by the Utes and the tribe no longer has any right to them," Adams asserted. "The Indians received other land and have collected $6,000,000 in cash from the Federal Treasury as a result of their treaty concessions."

The Seventy-fifth Congress up to yesterday has worked 430 days in 18 months—a record since President Roosevelt took office, the Associated Press said.

Members of the Seventy-first Congress, during President Hoover's Administration, spent 529 days on the job in 1929, 1930 and 1931. The present session has lasted 164 days. The special session in November and December continued for 37 days, and the regular 1937 session took 229 days.

Senator Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, majority leader, said the Senate would act finally today on the over-the-counter securities measure.

The bill would bring over-the-counter securities dealers under regulation by the commission. It has been approved by both Senate and House, but the Senate has to act on House amendments.

The measure provides for organization of voluntary associations of over-the-counter security dealers under SEC supervision and calls for a system of association rules and penalties designed to prevent fraudulent practices and excessive commissions.

Senators each received a gift cap—present from the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers International Union.

Each also got a request to wear the cap home. The union said this might help "overcome public apathy to caps" and aid employment in their industry.

The union concentrated on the 96 Senators, passing up the 435 Representatives.

The House sent to the White House a bill granting New Jersey and Pennsylvania authority to enter into a compact for construction and operation of a vehicular tunnel under the Delaware River between Gloucester County, N. J., and Delaware County, Pa.

TVA Committee Selects Engineer

By the Associated Press.

The Congressional committee to investigate the Tennessee Valley Authority agreed yesterday to offer the job of chief engineer to Thomas Panter, of Los Angeles.

This wound up the committee's work until it meets in Knoxville July 11.

Chairman Donahey (Democrat), of Ohio; Chief Counsel Francis Biddle and the committee engineer were empowered to select an auditor for the investigation.

Panter, committee members said, has had long experience in the power field and is now chief operating engineer for a publicly owned plant serving Los Angeles and adjoining communities.

Republican Absentees Ask More Questions

Officials of the Voters' Information Bureau maintained here by the Republican Party announced yesterday that inquiries of absentee voters have been more numerous there this year than at the same period two years ago. The bureau's headquarters are in the Second National Bank Building.

New Deal Extends Buying of Surplus

The New Deal drive to remove surplus commodities from various overburdened lines in consumer goods industry was extended yesterday with new orders pouring out for clothing, flour and other items.

Robert Fechner, director of the CCC, announced more than 60 manufacturers were awarded contracts calling for fall and winter delivery of about $6,000,000 worth of clothing and equipment for CC enrollees.

Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, disclosed the AAA will buy 914,000 barrels of surplus wheat flour for $4,200,000, to be distributed through State relief agencies to needy people in the next six weeks. West Coast prune growers and the Federal Surplus Commodity Corporation agreed on a program for the corporation to purchase 31,500 tons of surplus dried prunes, it was reported.

Senate Unit Backs Laws as U.S. Judge

The nomination of Bolitha J. Laws as an associate justice of the United States District Court was reported favorably to the Senate yesterday by a sub-committee of the Judiciary Committee. Confirmation is expected today.

Earlier Laws defended his record as chairman of the grievance committee of the District Bar Association against attacks by Jesse Duke and John Savage. Hearings were held before a sub-committee headed by Senator King (Democrat), of Utah.

Confirmation of a block of judiciary nominations, including that of Laws, was held up later when Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, objected to immediate consideration of the committee's report. He did not explain his action.

O'Connor Expects A Special Session To Aid Railroads

By the Associated Press.

Chairman O'Connor (Democrat), New York, of the House Rules Committee said yesterday Congress may be called into special session soon "if the expected financial collapse of a number of the large railroads occurs."

The New Yorker said the failure of Congress to enact legislation to aid the roads was "a matter of deep concern to me" because of the millions of employes involved.

"Many have been laid off already and more may be, adding to our unemployment and relief problems," he said.

I ONLY HAVE TO GROW 1,650,850 HAIRS TO AVOID BALDNESS!

Let Thomas Help You Save Your Hair
IF you live the normal span of life and never become bald you will grow about 15 full heads of hair—1,650,850 hairs. A hair grows to maturity in four years, falls out, and is replaced (if your scalp is healthy) by a new, live hair.
You avoid baldness, therefore, not by trying to stop normal hair-fall, but by seeing to it that your scalp replaces each hair which falls out. Now hair fails to grow when (1) the scalp is attacked by some local infection, such as dandruff; or (2) when scalp circulation is sluggish and the dormant hair lacks nourishment. Thomas treatment is designed to overcome the 14 local scalp ills which cause most baldness and to gently stimulate the sources of hair nourishment in the scalp.
For twenty years The Thomas' have been ending scalp worries for others, and can do the same for you. Call today for a free scalp examination, and learn how this reliable, proved method overcomes dandruff, stops abnormal hair loss, and promotes hair growth on thin and bald spots.

3 in House Kill Taxi Insurance Compromise

Schulte, O'Malley, Dondero Block Tydings Move to Save Bill.

Adamant opposition by several House members to any taxicab insurance bill yesterday blocked a move by Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, for a new compromise to save the legislation.

Tydings obtained unanimous consent of the Senate to recall the conference report, rejected by the House, from the Speaker's table.

When the Senate messenger read the request, three members of the House jumped to their feet and shouted as one man, "I object."

The members were Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana; O'Malley (Democrat), of Wisconsin, and Dondero (Republican), of Michigan.

The action apparently ends hope for reviving the legislation that has been before Congress for several years. Senator Tydings, who almost alone has fought to save the bill for the last few weeks, had not given up hope entirely, however.

Referring to House members who blocked his request, he said:

"They don't want the House bill, they don't want the Senate bill, and they don't want the conference report. Apparently they don't want any legislation for taxicab insurance.

"Consequently, the National Capital is likely to remain the only city of any size in the country that has no protection for the public against taxicab accidents."

Tydings earlier had said he had hopes of a last-minute compromise even though the Senate had to make further concessions to the House.

1937 U. S. Income Near 70 Billions, Highest Since '29

By the Associated Press.

The Commerce Department estimated yesterday that the Nation produced $69,817,000,000 of income in 1937, the highest since 1929, in spite of the recession in the last few months of last year.

The total was about $6,400,000,000 larger than 1936, $29,800,000,000 larger than the depression low year of 1932, and was about $11,300,000,000 below 1929.

The contracts call for delivery of 1,398,950 pairs of cotton and woolen trousers, 2,117,800 pairs of cotton and heavy and lightweight socks, 592,000 khaki and cotton shirts, 1,703,000 undershirts, 997,750 woolen and denim caps and hats, 370,300 mackinaws, 1,235,990 pairs of woolen and cotton drawers, 180,000 shoe laces, 300,000 black neckties, 48,000 sweaters, 120,000 raincoats, 500,000 pairs of gloves, 150,000 pairs of shoes, 100,000 pairs of overshoes, 3,135 pairs of boots, 250,000 denim jumpers and 550,000 belts.

Ashland, Pa., June 15 (AP).—A father and son, trapped in a makeshift mine since early Monday, were brought out today by rescuers.

Congress Trips Roosevelt Plan To See Wedding

By the Associated Press.

Congress' failure to adjourn last night upset President Roosevelt's schedule for his trip to Nahant, Mass., to attend the wedding of his son, John, and Miss Anne Lindsay Clark.

He had intended to leave this morning. Aides said he had deferred his departure tentatively until tonight, but that the hour was subject to change, depending upon what Congress did about adjournment.

Mr. Roosevelt had arranged to leave his train tonight at New London, Conn., and cruise on the yacht Potomac to Nahant for the Saturday noon wedding. Now he may not board the yacht until he reaches the vicinity of Boston.

Secret service men of the White House detail moved quietly into Nahant today in preparation for President Roosevelt's arrival.

Despite all questions, John refused to disclose how he and Anne intended to escape from the almost-island town, connected with the mainland only by a causeway, after the wedding reception.

Rayburn Braves 'Interference' Ire To Back Lamneck

The question of propriety or effectiveness of outside "interference" in politics of a State had two repercussions on Capitol Hill yesterday.

Representative Lamneck (Democrat), of Ohio, who has opposed some New Deal projects, received a letter from House Majority Leader Rayburn, of Texas, expressing the hope that his constituents would have the "good judgment" to return him to Congress.

At the same time, Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, who won renomination recently despite efforts of Relief Administrator Hopkins and other New Deal figures to defeat him, said he would not campaign in Indiana for Senator Van Nuys, also marked for defeat because of opposition to the President's reorganization plan. Senator Van Nuys, running as an independent, had listed Gillette among 11 Senators who, he said, had offered to campaign for him. But the Iowan yesterday said he did not approve of such "outside interference."

Rayburn's letter to Lamneck was understood to be one the floor leader is sending all Democratic House members.

R. H. Kelley Addresses 543 Receiving Degrees at Exercises.

There is no longer any separation of the powers of government between the judicial, legislative and executive functions, Robert Hamilton Kelley, general counsel for the Missouri Pacific Lines in Texas and an alumnus of the class of 1908, told 543 lay religious students who received their degrees at commencement exercises at Catholic University yesterday morning.

"On the surface," said Kelley, "we may seem to have a clean-cut separation of the three powers of government. In fact, we have not. Within the past few years we have created a host of new administrative agencies.

"Most of these, if not all, have some measure of all three powers. They legislate, they execute and they decide. And in most cases there is no effective appeal from their orders, which, in many places, seriously affect the citizens' rights.

"If the citizen, under such circumstances, gets a fair trial, accident must play a part."

Changing times and customs were stressed by Archbishop Michael J. Curley, of Baltimore, chancellor of the university, in his address to the graduates.

He was, he said, particularly pleased with the increasing number of women graduates.

The Rev. Dr. Henry Hyvernat, last surviving member of the original faculty of the university in 1889, was among the more than 2,000 persons present.

Road Littering Fought.

A campaign to discourage motorists from leaving refuse by the roadside was inaugurated at the last meeting of the Idyllwood Citizens Association. The organization asked that persons use "common courtesy" and not use their "neighbors' property for a dumping ground."

Czech Cabinet Studies Revised Nazi Demands

Henlein Drops Question of Breaking Prague-Soviet Alliance.

By the Associated Press.

Prague, June 15.—Worried cabinet ministers examined tonight a revised list of Sudeten German demands for minority rights.

The session followed 24 hours of almost continuous discussions of the nationality problem of Premier Milan Hodza, his government colleagues and Nazi-supported representatives of Konrad Henlein.

It was announced that Hodza told Sudeten German leaders he would base negotiations, in a few days, on his own proposed minorities statute and the Sudeten German demands.

Statements from both camps indicated the Germans were holding out for:

Equality of status between Czechs and Germans in Czechoslovakia.

Recognition of the 3,500,000 Sudeten Germans in Czechoslovakia as a legal entity.

Recognition of German territory as distinct from Czech territory.

Entire self-government in such territories.

Reparation for damages caused to Sudeten Germans since 1918 by "unjust" measures.

The right of individuals to acknowledge their German nationality and their adherence to the German political ideology.

These would be more conciliatory than the eight-point program Henlein announced April 24, when he asked termination of the Russian-Czechoslovak alliance and recognition of the Sudeten Germans' right to agitate Nazi ideas in Czechoslovakia's German-inhabited districts.

Occupation of Castellon de la Plana gave the insurgents control of the thirty-seventh provincial capital, with thirteen still remaining in government hands.

[Meanwhile, loyalist Gen. Jose Miaja abandoned Castellon Province and entrenched between 70,000 and 80,000 troops along a 47-mile front for the defense of Valencia, the United Press reported.

2,000 Militiamen Flee.

Tarbes, Franco-Spanish Frontier (Thursday), June 16 (U.P.).—Two thousand militiamen of the "lost" loyalist Forty-third Division, trapped high in the Pyrenees by insurgent forces, fled across the border into France today.

French infantry rushed to the frontier to disarm the loyalist soldiers as they pushed across. French authorities said they expected 9,000 refugees would cross into France by dawn.

Mussolini Replies To Hull on Bombs

Milan, Italy, June 15 (AP).—Premier Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo d'Italia, today declared the United States should halt the sale of bombing planes to all nations if she wants to be consistent.

Il Duce's paper made the suggestion in commenting on the declaration Secretary Hull made June 11 attempting to stop the flow of American-made planes to Japan and on his condemnation of bombing of civilians.

This is Goliath, a member of the largest of all species of frogs, which arrived yesterday at the Washington Zoo. Goliath, whose scientific name is Rana goliath, is a native of the Cameroons of West Africa; measures 9 inches from stem to stern when squatting, and still is a baby. This is the first representative of the species to enter the United States.

Except for Proboscis, He (or She) Is Well; Fellow Countryman of Famed Gargantua Is First of His (or Her) Race to See America.

Wars and floods may be rampant, but Washington zoologists and animal fans yesterday forgot such trifles to go down to the Zoo and see Goliath, first frog of its species ever to enter the United States.

Known to science as Rana Goliath, the animal is a member of the largest of all species of frogs. It arrived recently in New York from the Cameroons in Africa, also the original home of Gargantua the Great, gorilla traveling with the Ringling-Barnum & Bailey Circus.

Goliath is about 9 inches long, with his legs folded under him, but is still only a baby. Zoo Director William M. Mann said the species grows to more than a foot in length. The legs are even longer than the body.

"The Goliath frog has been seen by a few white men and it is a rare sight even to natives," Dr. Mann said. "This is the first one ever brought into this country."

The Berlin Zoo bought Goliath's bigger brother. A third frog was in the same consignment from Africa, but it died. The animal inhabits deep streams. Its skin and bones are highly prized by medicine men.

Goliath reached the Capital with a sore nose. He was shipped here yesterday from New York in a wooden crate which had a screened top for ventilation. An active, restless fellow, he bumped and rubbed the skin from his proboscis in futile attempts to escape. The flesh is expected to grow back.

Since it will eat only live food which it must catch itself, Goliath's fare will consist of insects, mice and smaller frogs.

The specimen, incidentally, is called a "he" only for convenience. Neither Dr. Mann nor anyone else knows the animal's sex.

Flood, Cholera Aggravate War Horror in China

China

tions in the area were disrupted.

The flood waters, fed by continuing rains, formed an ever-widening barrier between Japanese invaders and the North-South Peiping-Hankow Railway, which crosses the Lunghai at Chengchow.

Foreign military observers said that if the flood waters were charted correctly, Japanese would be forced to detour to the south in their drive on the Peiping-Hankow or launch a new offensive southward from Shansi Province.

Hundreds of farm families were said to have reached Chengchow and Kaifeng, 43 miles to the east. Thousands were perched along the Lunghai right-of-way across Honan Province plains.

Additional thousands were imperiled as the flood waters surrounded or submerged northern villages.

Chinese Airdrome Is Target.

Canton (Thursday), June 16 (U.P.). Japanese war planes raided the eastern suburb of Tienho three times between midnight and dawn today in an apparent attempt to destroy the Chinese airdrome. Damage was heavy, but casualties were believed to be light, because civilians already had fled the Tienho area.

Factories and the electric power plant were damaged yesterday when Japanese naval planes staged their 400th raid on Canton since last summer.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Berlin

British Jews under Field Marshal Goering's April 26 decree "Aryanizing" business, it was revealed tonight.

The British government told German authorities, in a note delivered more than a month ago, but unrevealed until tonight, that it would give full diplomatic assistance to British Jews.

The United States sent a similar note to the German government May 9.

Vienna, June 15.—The people of this city are learning the lesson that they must eat what they can get and that they cannot always have what they like.

The Third Reich holds down imports and German tourists exploring Austria by the thousands have bought up stocks of all kinds and quantities. Viennese housewives suddenly discovered that certain things are hard to obtain, for instance, rice or certain varieties of fruit and vegetables. They also complain that prices continue to be very high.

"Aryanization" is pushed forward uncompromisingly. Last Monday the national socialist party bureaus were supplied with formulas which will serve as ancestral passports. Every Austrian citizen is expected to fill in the name of his parents and grandparents and their racial status. If he is able to furnish documentary proof that they were non-Jewish, the document is approved and the holder is henceforward regarded as a full-fledged German. If he cannot produce all the documents that are needed, but if he is lucky, he is given the benefit of the doubt and provisionally recognized as Aryan, until he is able to produce the missing birth certificates. A copy of this ancestral passport will be kept in the party archives.

All Jews who can arrange to leave the country have prepared for emigration. The American consulate general in Vienna has counted some 50,000 applicants for visas since Chancellor Hitler proclaimed the anschluss.

Young Carpenter Near Death, Leg Cut by Buzz Saw

Thomas Gore, 23-year-old carpenter's helper, was near death in Walter Reed Hospital last night, his left leg ripped to the bone by an electric "buzz" saw.

Gore, who lives at 338 Twelfth street southeast, was working on a house under construction at 1309 Fort drive northwest, when his overalls became tangled in the saw blade.

Before the motor could be switched off, he had been drawn into the blade. Doctors said his condition was critical.

Cable Frantically That Their Industries, Based on Cheap Labor, Can't Pay Mainland Scale; Rum Distillers Anxious.

By W. F. O'Reilly.

San Juan, June 16.—Puerto Rican industrialists frantically but futilely cabled to Washington to prevent Puerto Rico's inclusion in the wages and hours bill on the ground that it would destroy a large part of the island's industries dependent upon a wage inferiority to the mainland.

Now they are staking their hopes that the commission created by the measure will adjust wage scales here to enable the export industries to continue. The bill, passed by both houses of Congress, is awaiting action by President Roosevelt.

Leaders of the needlework industry are most discouraged, contending that the measure will wipe out their business, which they say must compete with low-wage producers in foreign countries and exists only because of tariff protection and low wages here.

They predict that thousands will be thrown out of work if the bill is put into effect.

Makers of rum also complain that the measure threatens the island's new liquor industry, in which the highest paid factory employes receive 20 cents an hour for an eight-hour day but the usual rate is a dollar a day. Manufacturers are certain the wages and hours law here will stimulate the use of machines—a trend hitherto counteracted by the cheapness of labor.

Prudencio Rivera Martinez, insular commissioner of labor, pointed out that the new measure does not affect the cane sugar industry—Puerto Rico's largest—since agricultural labor is excluded from its provisions.

Rivera Martinez said he was uncertain about the application of the wages and hours law to homework in the needlework industry, since the question of whether a minimum wage was applicable to homeworkers still was before the courts.

Apparently Puerto Rico's inclusion was entirely unexpected by industrialists here.

Kennedy Embarks to Report To Roosevelt on Trade Pact

Kennedy

stressed the economic and political importance of reaching a trade agreement with the United States, and criticized the vested interests in this country which are lukewarm, if not hostile, toward any reduction of tariff walls against imports from the United States.

Opening the debate, Graham White, Liberal, said:

"It would be a first-class thing if, in the present state of this mad world, it could be shown that two great democracies could come to an agreement to co-operate on any subject whatever, but it would be a disaster of first magnitude if the endeavor failed and America was driven back to a state of complete isolation."

The Labor Party spokesman, H. B. Lees-Smith, said the United States was the greatest storehouse in the world, and the American attitude toward European trouble might decide the result of the next World War. He attacked the Federation of British Industries which, he said, was willing to imperil the whole existence of this nation for its own self-centered sectional interests.

He said its opposition to tariff concessions to America was "horrifying and disgusting in the state of our national danger." He added that the present tension in Europe could not last much longer and that "something was going to happen, one way or the other."

The Conservative member of Parliament, from the City of London, Sir Alan Henderson, said an Anglo-American trade agreement would be worth "more to us and the world than any petty losses of small sections of this country." Therefore he urged the Chamberlain government to get on more rapidly with negotiations in Washington. He, as well as other speakers, indorsed the Van Zeeland report, which was designed to promote international trade and break down tariff restrictions and eliminate some economic causes of war. This report is gathering dust in the pigeonholes of Whitehall.

Replying for the Government, Oliver Stanley, president of the board of trade, agreed that it was "vitally essential" to achieve an Anglo-American trade pact, and he said both sides should recognize the advantages of such an agreement.

Stanley was not impressed with the need for economic appeasement from the point of view of peace and war, as he thought the causes of war were not usually economic, but were "very much due to ideas."

Dealing a polite death blow to the Van Zeeland report, Stanley said he concurred with a good deal of the report, but would not press it forward because of "present difficulties."

Landis Wife's Dying Words Barred in Trial

Landis

never once removing his gaze from the witness stand.

The court's refusal to permit the death-bed statement marked the first major defense victory since Landis went on trial Monday. Earlier yesterday the crowded courtroom was provided with a mild sensation when Prosecutor Heflin called Miss Virginia Lee Simpson, pretty brunette, who admitted accepting the ardent attentions of young Landis before his wife was killed.

He Gave Her Jewelry.

A former student nurse at the Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital, Miss Simpson said "Jimmy" gave her jewelry and took her out two or three times a week. She denied, however, knowing he was married.

She identified a wrist watch as one Landis had given her soon after they met last fall. Previously, Mrs. Thelma Souder, a sister of the slain woman, had testified that the same watch was given by Landis to his future wife when she graduated from McKinley High School.

"Did Landis give you any other jewelry?" Heflin asked.

"Yes, he gave me a diamond ring on my birthday, March 15."

"What did you do with the ring?"

"I wore it on and off until I read in the newspapers of the death of Mrs. Landis."

Miss Simpson said she then gave the ring to a friend who returned it to Jimmy. She then resigned her nursing position and returned to her home in Atkinson, N. C.

Wilbur L. Scarborough, a friend of the defendant, told of having "double dates" with Landis, Miss Simpson and her sister, Daphne. He said Landis told him of his love for Miss Simpson and had planned also to give her a wedding ring. This was refused as "improper" by the pretty nurse, Scarborough said.

The night Mrs. Landis was found beaten along a lonely stretch of Twenty-fourth street (near Taylor street) northeast, Landis was on duty at the Fireboat, Seventh Street Wharves.

Says He Looked Nervous.

Fireman Dewey W. Neil, who relieved Landis from watch duty at 1 a. m., testified he saw the defendant again about 4 a. m. in the fire house kitchen.

"He (Landis) was making a cup of coffee and was leaning his head against the icebox," Neil told the jury. "I asked him what was the trouble and he said he had been having bad dreams and couldn't sleep."

Thomas Boss, a milkman, related how he found Mrs. Landis unconscious beside the road while making his rounds about 3:20 a. m. the morning of March 24. He said the street was dimly lighted and her crumpled body was lying near a dirt bank, almost concealed in the darkness.

Future Bright, Rotary Is Told By Graduates

Seven High School Seniors Predict 'New Era of Prosperity.'

Announcing well-developed plans for their careers, seven Washington high school seniors assured members of the Rotary Club yesterday that the future is not as dark as it is painted.

"The outlook is far from dark," declared Reuben Cohen, Aancostia High School's representative, "I see a new era of prosperity for industry ahead. I am going to college. When I get out prosperity will be here, and I'll be ready for it."

With "honor" students selected to represent the six other high schools in the city, Cohen addressed the Rotarians on "My Aspirations." Each youth was introduced by his school principal in the club's annual program for high school graduates. The principals were introduced by Dr. Harvey A. Smith, assistant superintendent of schools.

Aspire to Professions.

Glenn Watts, captain of Eastern High cadets, said he preferred teaching to all other vocations and would seek admission to Wilson Teachers' College in the fall. "However, if I fail to show aptitude in that profession after my preparatory years of training, I have another occupation to fall back on," Watts said, explaining that he was already employed part time as a theater usher and thought he saw opportunities of advancement in the theater business.

Walter W. Burns, a cadet captain at McKinley High, said he will take up law, specializing in the patent field. Wilbert E. Locklin, of Central, will also pursue a law career, beginning with study at Johns Hopkins University, which has awarded him a scholarship.

"I understand the law profession is overcrowded," said Locklin, "but I also understand that the number of good barristers is not so outstanding that there isn't room for more."

Wants to Bring Prosperity.

Clem Williams, of Woodrow Wilson, who holds a scholarship to Yale, said he would study economics, his chief ambition being "to bring about some of that prosperity I hear is coming."

Adrian Recinos, jr., a Guatemala-born Western High senior, will enter Harvard with the intention of going into the medical profession.

"Guatemala is a great place," he told the Rotarians, "and when I am a doctor I may go down there and see what I can do with my profession."

Swope Says Farewell.

"Ever since I was a boy in Dallas, Tex., I have been watching airplanes," said John Mitchell, the Roosevelt representative, "and so I am going to Maryland University to study aeronautics."

Yesterday's luncheon in the Willard was also marked by the farewell of Robert B. Swope, who retired as the club's president. Club members presented him with a motion picture camera, which he will take with him on a Western trip next week.

T. L. Chadbourne, Sugar Expert, Dies

By the United Press.

New York, June 15.—Thomas L. Chadbourne, New York attorney, died today en route to a hospital, apparently of heart disease.

He was about to board his yacht at the New York Yacht Club mooring in the East River when he was stricken. He was 67.

Chadbourne was an expert on international markets and originated the Chadbourne plan for world sugar-production control.

In 1931 he was named head of the sugar stabilization commission after adoption of his plan by Cuba, Java, Germany, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Belgium and Hungary. The plan involved segregation of sugar production to keep price levels sufficiently high to insure profitable production.

Attorney Cornelius H. Doherty, representing the plaintiff, said that the gallery was responsible for refuse permitted to accumulate. She fell down a stairway and injured her arm and shoulder. "Nonsense, Son—women do it every day, now. Haven't you read about the latest achievements of that all-female medical college?"

"Prague's concessions will satisfy Hitler—I guess the war scare is over."
"Over? Far from it! The concessions are unimportant. The only question is whether France and Britain continue to stand firm behind the Czechs."

"It's easier to face a camera than a Broadway audience—just ask Hollywood."
"Don't be silly — George Jean Nathan explodes that theory in today's NEWSWEEK."

How far will the New Deal high command carry the party purge in the face of an Iowa failure? Can woman's skill ever overcome popular prejudice in medicine? Are filmland favorites usually Broadway busts? Will little Czechoslovakia need . . . and get . . . Anglo-French help again?

These are questions in millions of minds . . . minds of everyone who has read the past week's news. What are the answers? What is their true significance? Read NEWSWEEK and know. On the pages of this different magazine you'll find—first, a synopsis of the news. Second, an analysis of all the forces, issues, and motives that brought it about. And, most important of all, an interpretation of what it all means in terms of tomorrow.

Hague Swears He Will Spurn CIO Donations

By the Associated Press.

Newark N. J., June 10.—Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, a vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, swore in Federal Court today he would refuse Democratic campaign contributions from C. I. O. unions and the American Labor Party because they were "undesirables" and communistic. He added that he spoke only for himself.

He said candidates who sought A. L. P. support should be defeated.

Hague spent a hectic third day on the witness stand defending himself against charges that he suppressed free speech and assemblage in the city he has governed for a quarter century.

He said Senator Barkley, Democratic majority leader, running for re-election in Kentucky, should repudiate support by the C. I. O.'s United Mine Workers if they "are associated with the Reds" in that State.

"Courts Are the Law."

Seeking earlier to explain away the "I am the law" quotation attributed to him, Hague declared "I have never desired to be the law."

"I have always felt that the courts were the law," said the tall, athletically built witness, his school master demeanor through many hours on the stand quickly changing to anger as the questioning was taken over by Morris L. Ernst, New York C. I. O. lawyer.

Charging his broad-shouldered, dark-haired questioner was trying to "browbeat" him, Hague once asked the protection of Judge William Clark, who is hearing the suit by the C. I. O., American Civil Liberties Union and others for an injunction restraining Hague and fellow officials from interfering with their activities.

Burkitt Appeal Refused.

Ernst also asked the court for aid in restricting Hague to direct answers. Several times Judge Clark told the mayor he must answer the question directly, advising him his own counsel could later bring out the explanations Hague insisted on giving.

Meanwhile, the State supreme court at Trenton denied James A. (Jeff) Burkitt, long-time political foe of Hague, a review of his conviction on a disorderly person charge in Jersey City which followed his futile attempt to speak there without a permit.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

The Comptroller General's interpretation of Section 11 of the March, 1938, regulations rules that a Saturday which falls within a period of leave is charged as a full day of annual leave instead of being treated as a Sunday.

Bureau of Engraving and Printing employes are kicking. "The new leave regulations hit hardest at those of us who work in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing . . . This ruling is especially unfair to bureau employes who are paid on a per diem scale based on a 5-day, 40-hour week . . . We work more hours than most Government employes," they are saying.

Treasury Local 11, U. F. W. A., announces a move to secure a revision of the ruling. The national office, at request of Local 11, is addressing a letter to the President "pointing out the unfairness of the new regulations and asking an executive order to eliminate this hardship."

Goings-on: A punster writes that Prof. Leo Batten's class in jiu jitsu (I. D. R. A. innovation) is growing by leaps and bounds. Classes are held each Monday and Wednesday afternoons at 4. "The jiu jitsu class, outgrowth of the sensational pants-splitting demonstration staged by Prof. Batten aided and abetted by Thomas Hampton, early in April, has grown to more than 25, eight of whom are members of what was known as the 'weaker sex' before jiu jitsu appeared. Now, Prof. Batten asserts, these half-pint females have learned how to put strong men in their places by simple twists of the wrist, and males whose physical quotients have rated at less than minus have accomplished the knack of tossing belligerent behemoths to the mat with the greatest of ease."

* * * *

"Prof. Batten points with pride to the fact that one of his most proficient pupils is a young man handicapped by the loss of a limb. Despite this, the man has won the admiration of the class by his skill at jiu jitsu and is well qualified to defend himself against bodily attack."

Prof. Batten now is training members of the Guard Force, NPS. "He intends making the guardians of Uncle Sam's buildings the best jiu jitsu trained organization in the world . . ."

A large number of Census employes have received dismissal notices effective this month—despite the fact that the work to which they are assigned is not yet completed. Commerce Local 23, U. F. W. A., wants to have the dismissal notices recalled or else have the affected employes placed on a furlough, assuring that they would be given first preference when the work is resumed. It is wondered what will become of the work—which is considered important—in the meanwhile. The local's adjustment committee has made a date with the Census personnel director for tomorrow afternoon to discuss the situation. In the meantime, facts are wanted. A meeting has been called for 4:30 this afternoon to bring out these facts.

"In what sections and divisions have the notices been issued; how many persons have been affected by such notices in each unit; how much of the work on which each unit was engaged has been completed?" All who have received dismissal notices have been asked to attend the meeting, to be held at the U. F. W. A. Building, 532 Seventeenth street northwest.

Agent 2-R wig-wags: These last days of Congress are seeing hundreds of private bills passed . . . During 1937, 3,796 bills were introduced in Congress pertaining to veterans' benefits; of these 1,108 were public bills, and 2,688 were for private relief . . . Jerry Hart, GAO, won the Federal Golf Tourney . . . The postmaster bill, up for the President's signature, provides for three ways in appointing postmasters: The reappointment of the incumbent postmaster; the selection of one from the civil service and a competitive examination in accordance with civil service laws and rules and regulations of the President and the Civil Service Commission . . . Approximately 1,000,000 students may begin their business careers, or take a job during vacation, the Office of Education says; which will certainly have a bearing on the employment situation . . . Some people already on relief will soon be drinking grape fruit juice; The Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation has made an initial offer to buy 500,000 cases of the juice during June for distribution among the needy.

Publisher Urges 'Hands-Off' Ballot

Marion, Va., June 15 (AP).—Robert Lane Anderson, publisher of the Marion Democrat and candidate for the presidency of the Young Democratic Clubs of Virginia, emphasized in an editorial today the imporatance of the "hands-off" policy of the Young Democrats in pre-convention and pre-primary Democratic contests.

"The best way to discourage bitter, unhealthy, undemocratic factionalism in our party," the editorial said, "is first to discourage it in ourselves. We think the Young Democrats also need to remind themselves of what may be called the 'apprentice idea' in young democracy."

House Upholds Data Gained by Wire-Tapping

Tap

mer United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett, that they would proceed with cases against Abe Plisco, alias William Dietz, indicted with 31 others on a charge of conspiring to violate District gaming laws. However, last January 7 Dietz sought to have the indictment dismissed by Justice Joseph W. Cox in District Court.

Finally on February 11 Justice Cox, in a momentous ruling based on the Nardone decision, ordered all evidence obtained by wire-tapping in the Dietz case "suppressed" or "quashed." This opinion so crippled the indictments against Dietz and the other 31 defendants that the cases were dropped.

Still another District case whose collapse was caused by the wire-tapping ban was one against 32 defendants charged with conspiring to violate the liquor tax act. Considerable evidence presented by Federal agents was obtained by tapping telephone wires.

Efforts were made to free Sam Beard, District gaming czar, and 12 others on the basis of the Supreme Court's action, but without success. Vice squad raiders testified in the District Supreme Court May 2, 1935, they had sat in Beard's office after a raid and had taken bets from "people who identified themselves over the phone by numbers."

All Officers Included.

The first section of the new bill makes it a crime, punishable by a $10,000 fine or imprisonment for two years or both, to use any wire or radio communication facility in the commission of a felony. It also extends its provisions to all peace officers, State and local as well as Federal.

Critics of the amendment construed it as enabling any department head to tap the wires of subordinates or of private citizens on the pretext a crime was about to be committed. In an effort to limit possible abuses, the House insisted on inserting a provision that any officer, agent or other person who intercepted communications without the authorization of his department head, or who divulged information so obtained otherwise than as provided in the act, should be subject to a fine of $10,000 or imprisonment for two years or both.

After the bill was passed, Representative Wolcott (Republican), of Michigan, who was not on the House floor when the vote was taken, charged that under cover of a praiseworthy effort to discourage the use of telephone, telegraph or radio facilities in the commission of crime, Congress had enacted one of the "most vicious pieces of legislation ever written on the statute books."

On the mere certification of a department head that a crime was about to be committed, he asserted, agents of the executive department could tap the wires of any citizen, not excluding Congressmen. The bill, he charged, did not name any authority to whom the certification was to be made or provide for any review of the decision of a department head that a crime was about to be committed.

Reasons For Approval.

In reporting the bill, the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce contended such an amendment was made necessary by the Supreme Court's decision outlawing the use of evidence obtained by wire-tapping in the prosecution of suspected criminals.

"As a result of this decision," the report stated, "the Federal law enforcement officers are forbidden to listen in on communications by wire or radio, with the result that the organized underworld is at full liberty to make unrestricted use of the wire-and-radio facilities of the Nation to carry on their rackets and schemes to the detriment of the public."

The committee emphasized that the Secret Service was forbidden to intercept such communication, even though it had reason to believe there was a plot afoot to harm the President.

Rebuked by Lehman.

A similar proposal by District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, that the New York State constitutional convention legalize wire tapping by law enforcement authorities and the use of evidence so obtained in the State courts drew a sharp rebuke from Gov. Lehman.

In a letter to the convention Monday, Gov. Lehman urged it to strengthen, rather than relax, the protection accorded citizens by the Bill of Rights of the Constitution. He argued that the prohibition against unreasonable search and seizure accorded by the State constitution be fortified by a ban on wire-tapping.

Carpenter. Several hundred persons, including Federal and District officials, attended the dedicatory ceremonies sending the luxury train on its way. Farley spoke, but Mrs. Farley said only "Oh!" when she put her hand on the brake instead of the throttle while warming up.

House Speaker Rebuffs Lewis On Walsh Act

Labor

Walsh-Healey act, under which firms doing more than $10,000 business with the Government annually must observe rigorous wage-hour standards set by the Secretary of Labor.

The amendment would lower the limit to $2,000 and permit the Labor Secretary to blacklist for three years all firms adjudged violators of either the act's regulations or of those in the national labor relations act, unless the Secretary recommends otherwise.

Crosser Bill Passed.

The Senate, meanwhile, passed the Crosser bill setting up an unemployment insurance system for railroad employes. This bill, concentrating unemployment compensation in a separate system outside the Social Security Board, was opposed by both the Treasury and the Social Security Board at hearings in the House, but Administration leaders in both branches certain the members were going to enact the measure anyway, withdrew opposition.

Lewis, fuming at the failure of repeated personal efforts to save the Walsh-Healey amendment at this session, including a previous visit to the Speaker's office in which he threatened to throw the C. I. O. against the New Deal this autumn if the bill were not passed, held a press conference outside the Speaker's office. He said:

"We advised the Speaker that we represented some millions of Americans who have a right to know how their paid Representatives would vote on this question.

"We do not think the Rules Committee has exercised a proper legislative function in denying this rule. We want to know who the friends of labor are. It is cowardly for members to return to their districts and hide behind the pusillanimous Rules Committee which is notoriously friendly to corporations and unfriendly to labor."

Lewis warned again that members of the preponderantly Democratic House soon would "return home to seek the support of labor." He stopped his sentence there, leaving the rest to the imagination.

Green Chortles Over Defeat.

Downtown, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, chortling over Lewis' defeat, said:

"All chances of adoption of the bill have been ruined by the C. I. O. chief and his flunkies who attempted to dictate to Congress in the same way they dictate to the C. I. O.

"Congressmen sat down on Lewis so hard as to make him a completely ludicrous figure."

pocket and went up the hall to the door of the bedroom. I went in and picked Skeegie up in my arms and placed two large, white, clean handkerchiefs over his face."

"I went out the back door. He appeared to be sleeping. I carried him in both arms and held the handkerchiefs over his mouth and, I guess, over his nose, but I didn't know it.

"I walked home. It was dark and when I got home I put Skeegie on the bed and shook him and called his name but got no answer.

"I was afraid and tried artificial respiration to try and wake him up. I got cold water from the icebox and bathed his face but he didn't wake up."

"I knew he was dead. He didn't struggle or move. I saw he was dead and didn't know what to do.

"I picked him up and started out the back door. I didn't have any particular place in mind and went through the woods back of the house to the place where the body was found and placed it there.

"Then I went home and got the ransom note . . ."

"I want to make this plea," he said in conclusion. "It was the first time I was ever involved in anything like this. No one else ever had money tempt them that much."

Chain Store Manager Held on Assault Count

Lehman Adams, 26, Washington chain store manager, was held for action of the Prince Georges County grand jury yesterday by Judge George B. Merrick in Prince Georges County Police Court at Hyattsville. Adams was charged with assault with intent to kill after he is alleged to have cut Louie Talton, 420 Eleventh street northeast, in a fight at the Dude Ranch.

Miss Thelma Adams, sister of Adams' wife, whom Talton escorted, testified her brother-in-law became angry because Talton danced with his wife. Talton was cut on the throat and face and right hand. He was treated at Sibley Hospital.

House Heckler Gets Gate—to Immortality

Arts

York, comes up with from the House Patents Committee.

Sirovich, this time sponsoring a measure creating a Fine Arts Bureau in the Interior Department to promote the theater, music, literature, graphic and plastic arts, the dance, etc., was answering insinuations that art would be "regimented" by the Government. He shouted:

"Art is free; you can't regiment art and literature!"

In a rich and resonant bellow, up spoke the red-faced character (yesterday's first citizen):

"Why can't you?"

Amid wild applause, the Member From Nowhere was escorted out.

And where he left off, Representative Dewey Short (Republican), of Missouri, took up. Short laid into the measure so effectively that the members were still laughing as they killed the bill, 195 to 35. He began gently by referring to the newlywed 67-year-old Secretary of the Interior, Harold L. Ickes. Short said:

"I don't think the members of the House, sympathizing with 'Honest Harold' as we all do, should add anything to his burdens at this time."

As the members gurgled, Short continued:

"Why, I'd resign my seat in Congress tomorrow if I thought I could be appointed to be the supervisor of the dance, or teach all the sweet young things the plastic arts."

One arm curved languorously overhead, he assumed a graceful tiptoe ballet pose and shouted:

"With 2,000,000 men out of work, the WPA is spending money in my district hiring old maids to teach mothers how to pin diapers on babies!

"Men love the 'Moonlight Sonata' of Beethoven, the minuets of Mozart, the scherzo of Chopin, but they can't enjoy them on empty stomachs! I wouldn't even like Verdi or Puccini with the seat out of my pants!" Waltzing debonairly in the aisle, he whirled in a fluttering butterfly pose to demand

"So now we teach toe-dancing to restore prosperity!"

Sirovich, who had lauded the "frozen poetry" of the Capitol's architecture in multisyllabled phrases, was so crushed by the defeat of his bill that he voted both for and against it.

Radio Speakers Praise Purity of Milk Here

Care taken to insure purity of milk delivered to Washington consumers was pointed out to radio listeners last night in a broadcast over WMAL, sponsored by the District Medical Society.

Two representatives of local dairy companies, Clark Diamond and F. D. Lefevre, explained the milk is not touched by hand from the time it leaves the cow until it reaches the consumer.

second deficiency bill last night. Adjournment plans were discarded. Confused spectators still lingered in the galleries after both houses had recessed.

Asks Administration Aid.

Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, Senate author of the farm parity amendment, solicited Administration support for the Senate plan of subsidy distribution in calls at the White House and on Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. He failed to disclose the President's attitude, but indicated the House formula would be accepted.

The rejected Senate plan of farm price distributions would have given cotton farmers a larger share—$100,000,000. Wheat farmers would have received $50,000,000, and corn farmers $50,000,000. Rice and tobacco farmers would receive the balance under either plan.

Center of filibuster opposition to the $375,000,000 flood-control bill were provisions giving the Federal Government full title to lands involved in reservoirs and dams authorized in this and previous flood-control bills.

To Pay Entire Costs.

These provisions authorize the Government to pay the entire construction cost of projects and to assume full title and rights of ownership to these projects—to develop them as it chose. Facilities would be installed in the dams "for possible future use in development of hydro-electric power." Led by O'Mahoney, Senators vainly fighting to block the report contended this would violate ownership rights of affected States.

Following Senate approval of the report, Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, one of those who battled to kill it, declared that "the fight has just begun." He predicted that communities on non-navigable streams would contest in the courts the Government's power to condemn their land and take title.

House override of the President's farm land bank interest rate veto came without extensive debate. Chairman Jones, of the House Agriculture Committee, took the floor briefly to explain that this was the same measure that had been vetoed last year and restored by Congress. He said the same conditions which made it necessary for the House to insist upon the rates a year ago continued today.

In the Senate, Majority Leader Barkley predicted the Senate also would override the veto, "because conditions haven't gotten any better."

Save for its swift rebuff of the interest rate veto, and Speaker Bankhead's "No" to John L. Lewis on Walsh-Healey bill action this session, the House coasted dully through the last items on its docket, and scheduled another session for 10 a. m. today.

Highlighting House action was passage of a bill permitting Federal agents, with permission of their department heads, to obtain evidence by wire-tapping. The measure is designed to overcome a December Supreme Court ruling that evidence obtained in this manner is not valid in the courts.

The House also passed and sent to the White House the Maloney bill for regulation of brokers and dealers engaged in over-the-counter security transactions. The bill provides a system of self-policing by associations to be established and supported by regulations to be issued by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Postmasters And Politics.

Critics of the bill placing first, second and third class postmasters under a modified civil service system find it easy to expose defects in the measure. Its provisions fall considerably short of an ideal merit system. Certainly it will not eliminate political influence in the appointment of postmasters. Yet it is unquestionably a step in the right direction.

Allocation of key positions in the Government's largest business enterprise as a political reward is utterly indefensible. Like other non-policy making servants of the Government, postmasters should be chosen for indefinite terms solely on the basis of their qualifications for the job. For political reasons, however, Congress has never been willing completely to abandon its interest in these appointments. It is not willing to do so now. But it has agreed to set up legal safeguards that have heretofore been lacking.

Under the bill sent to the President incumbent postmasters will be able to acquire permanent tenure through noncompetitive examinations. In actual practice that means they will have to meet only the minimum requirements. The incompetents should be weeded out. Many mediocre appointees will remain. Nevertheless, the fact that they may acquire permanent status should give them greater interest in their jobs and improve efficiency.

The weakest provision of the bill, from the long-time viewpoint, is that requiring senatorial confirmation of new appointees to these posts. Vacancies will be filled by competitive examinations. But any one of the three highest candidates may be selected. Since confirmation is necessary, that may mean virtual appointment of postmasters of the three highest classes by Senators. Public servants so chosen frequently feel a greater obligation to the Senator in question than to the Postoffice Department.

In spite of these defects, the bill provides an opportunity for much improvement of personnel in the postal service. To a large extent its effect will depend upon the way in which it is administered. With a nonpartisan executive at the head of the Postoffice Department, politics might now be greatly minimized in the business of distributing the mails. So long as Presidents make a practice of naming party leaders to the postmaster generalship, however, no law can be expected to establish a politics-proof merit system.

Mr. Chamberlain's Decision.

Prime Minister Chamberlain's decision not to protect British ships trading with ports in the Spanish war zone while they are in territorial waters is good news for Franco's insurgent forces. The warning that British ships enter ports liable to military operations at their own risk will doubtless make it more difficult for republican Spain to obtain supplies. To that extent the London government may be accused of aiding the nationalists. Before this decision is condemned, however, the alternatives open to the British should be examined.

As Mr. Chamberlain points out, this problem is in no way parallel to the control of pirate submarines in the Mediterranean. British and French warships put an end to the submarine menace on the high seas. But the airplane attacks on British ships have taken place in Spanish ports. Protection could be afforded, Mr. Chamberlain says, only "by stationing anti-aircraft guns on land or on battleships in or near port."

If such guns were used aginst any planes appearing to menace British ships that action would amount to a defense of the port and would therefore constitute active intervention in the civil war.

Opponents of the government in the House of Commons bitterly accused the Prime Minister of acquiescing in the bombing of British ships. In reply Mr. Chamberlain pointed to his warning to Franco that repetition of the attacks will result in "serious injury" to the friendly relations between Britain and the Burgos authorities. Obviously he is more concerned with isolation of the conflict to the Spanish Peninsula than with the use of force to safeguard British ships in Spanish ports.

That attitude is in line with the nonintervention policy which the British government has consistently tried to uphold. Mr. Chamberlain's decision may be criticized from a number of angles. But from the major viewpoint of safeguarding the peace of Europe there is much to commend it.

Legislative Sharp Practice.

Before the country as a whole was even aware that the issue had been raised, the Senate yesterday decided to extend Federal jurisdiction over streams in need of flood control. That decision, vitally affecting the basic principles of American government, came significantly at the height of the preadjournment rush. It stands out as one of the most dubious acts of the expiring Congress.

As the flood-control bill passed the House, it was a constructive measure, providing much-needed funds for important conservancy work. The Senate attached seemingly ambiguous amendments to the bill. At any rate, the conference committee took advantage of a confused situation to write into the measure a gross usurpation of the traditional right of the States to control over their own territory.

The bill as it emerged from conference provides that lands for the construction of dams, reservoirs, channel improvement and rectification projects shall be taken over by the United States. In passing the flood-control act of 1936 specific provision was made that there should be no condemnation of property within any State without its consent. Now at the very end of a session, with little or no consideration of what is at stake, that important principle has been abandoned.

Nor is that necessarily the worst feature of the flood-control bill finally accepted by the Senate yesterday. It was made retroactive, so that it applies to projects in which the Federal Government has participated since 1928. In flagrant disregard of the agreements with the States under which these projects have been undertaken, they are now to be seized by the central Government upon reimbursement of the actual costs to local agencies. That provision involves not only an unwarranted extension of centralized power. It also embodies a breach of good faith.

Aside from the character of the bill, the manner of handling condemns it. In effect, this measure gives the Administration sweeping authority to set up power projects without consent of the States in which they are to be located. But that objective was never divulged until the bill was on the verge of passage. Most legislators had regarded it simply as a flood-control measure. And when Senators objected to this surreptitious procedure they were told that the bill was an Administration "must" which made opposition a waste of effort.

That is a sorry paragraph of legislative history to write on the closing pages of the Seventy-fifth Congress.

Freedom Means Freedom.

From the standpoint of logic it would be easy enough to expose the fatuity of Mayor Hague's evident belief that the Bill of Rights has no application when it is a question of dealing with "subversive" groups. But fatuous or not, his statements under questioning in the District Court at Newark are no occasion for laughter. Far from expressing a conception of liberty peculiar to himself, Mr. Hague voices one which is shared by a disconcertingly large number of Americans, who, nevertheless, ironically believe themselves firmly devoted to support of the Constitution.

For this reason it has become vitally important to recognize that liberty ceases to exist when it is made conditional upon the acceptance of a fuehrer's set of political beliefs. Of the ease with which freedom may be killed the world today has many obvious illustrations. It is humiliating to see the totalitarian doctrine now entrenching in New Jersey.

Nor is the importance of the Bill of Rights in any way modified by the fact that there doubtless are, within the United States, "subversive groups" which, if they should get their way, would themselves make short shrift of our constitutional liberties. Because some would deny liberty does not mean it should be denied to them. To argue that way is to subvert the very principles we claim to cherish.

The essence of political freedom was never expressed with greater clarity than by the late Mr. Justice Holmes. His famous observation in the Rosika Schwimmer case can never be quoted too often. "If there is any principle of the Constitution," he wrote, "that more imperatively calls for attachment than any other it is the principle of free thought—not free thought for those who agree with us, but freedom for the thought that we hate."

The Camp Springs Charges.

Representative Byron Scott has made some very serious charges of attempted graft in connection with the securing of options on land needed for the proposed Camp Springs airport site. The adverse vote on the bill, following Mr. Scott's sensational allegations, obviously should not be the end of the matter. If agents of the Federal Government have been engaging in the practices stated, they should be identified and dealt with severely. And Mr. Scott has an obligation to assist those in authority by putting them in possession of all relevant facts.

Furthermore, charges of fraud brought against anonymous individuals cast a shadow upon the reputations of their co-workers and associates. Mr. Scott's accusations are likely to embarrass all the agents of the Government who have at any time taken options on land for the airport.

The Congressmen, Senators and other members of the commission appointed to select a site and arrange for its acquisition should, therefore, insist upon a thoroughgoing investigation of the graft charges. Both the chairman of the National Park and Planning Commission and the Engineer Commissioner for the District would no doubt welcome such a probe, as they were primarily responsible for the selection of agents working in the area.

The outcome of such an inquiry ought not to prejudice the case either for or against the Camp Springs site. If vendi agents are in the Government's employ, any site will offer temptation to illegitimate gain. Mr. Scott's information, provided it is correct, simply points to the need for changing present methods of acquiring private land for public purposes. If negotiations cannot be conducted on an honest basis through private agents, condemnation proceedings provide the simple alternative method of acquisition.

The Destruction Of China.

In 1812 the Russians deliberately burned Moscow in order to minimize significance of the French capture of their capital and to embarrass the military operations of the invader. Historians attribute the subsequent collapse of Napoleon's empire largely to this heroic act of national self-sacrifice.

Today the Japanese charge that the Chinese have themselves destroyed the dikes which confine the Yellow River and are hampering efforts to repair the breaks before disaster spreads. If true, it is high tribute to the patriotism of those who have been fighting almost with bare hands against Japan's tremendous war machine. It also shows what the Chinese think of Japan, if they would ruin huge areas of their country rather than see Central China brought under Nippon's yoke.

With or without intentional destruction, however, the Yellow River would probably have burst its bounds in the course of the fighting which has been raging along its banks. The great stream, traditionally known as "China's Sorrow," is only kept under control by ceaseless conservancy work in the great central plain. The modernization of these flood-control operations has been one of the many achievements of Chiang Kai-shek's government. But the extent of the system alone makes it particularly subject to the destruction which is the essence of modern warfare.

Japan's customary crocodile tears may have a certain sincerity in the case of this tragedy, since the safety of many of her own troops is threatened. But on the whole the disaster accords well with the evident Japanese intent to ruin China as a preliminary to the successful extension of Tokyo's political and economic control. Many instances of this wholly ruthless policy are apparent.

In addition to the physical destruction wantonly inflicted on Shanghai, Nanking, Canton and other centers there is the seemingly deliberate effort to demoralize Chinese civilian life. This very week, at Geneva, the Japanese member of the opium advisory committee has been forced to admit that the traffic in opium has greatly increased in the parts of China now under his government's control. A wealth of evidence indicates that the Japanese authorities are deliberately fostering the narcotics trade in China. There is much revenue in this shameful business, and also the incidental advantage that it undermines the Chinese will to resist subjection.

Systematically and efficiently Japan endeavors to destroy the roots of Chinese civilization. Her bombing planes seek out Chinese factories; her troops dismantle China's schools and universities; her officials connive in debasing the population with narcotic drugs.

On top of these well-attested outrages comes the Yellow River flood, in which the invaders are as clearly culpable as though they had themselves dynamited the dikes. It is an unparalleled indictment which the Tokyo government is steadily assembling against itself. And it will be in Japan's long-run interests if her rulers begin to realize that the points in this indictment are being noted carefully by peoples other than their Chinese victims.

Age Of Synthetics.

From the Bangor Commercial.

Americans are accustomed to look upon Germany and other economically hard-pressed nations as forced to the creation and use of substitutes and synthetic products, while they live on the fat of the land of plentiful resources. The surprising information is furnished by the Mellon Institute that the United States is abreast of the world in novel synthetics, and that $100,000,000 was spent on industrial research in 1937.

Experiments in Texas have shown that the addition of carbon black gives a pavement dark luster that reduces glare; vitamin A is being produced from fish-liver oils by molecular distillation; the electrolytic reduction of sugars to corresponding alcohols is being carried out on a commercial basis; silver bearings are used in high-power aviation engines; heat-treated cast iron replaces steel for gears and other parts; incandescent lamps are filled with carbon dioxide, sponges are made of cellulose and new adhesives from synthetic resins; there are plastic woods, and ink which dries instantaneously; metals are colored by electricity, and many other newly perfected and practical devices and compounds are the result of American research.

European leadership in pharmaceutical research is held by Switzerland, the demand for insecticides for fruit trees has reorganized the sulphur industry in Palestine, German chemists are aiding Brazil in finding uses for surplus coffee. Italy is developing the tannin and dye resources of Ethiopia. France is making strides in gasoline synthesis, sewage is mixed with peat in Stuttgart to make fertilizer, Great Britain has revived the manufacture of synthetic phenol, in India sirup and soap are made from cashew, Sweden has found uses for straw in industry.

"Educational Campaign."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The editorials in The Post are vigorous and timely. The group in the issue of June 8 were splendid. Such straight from the shoulder thrusts as that aimed at the head of New Jersey's fascist Mayor Hague of Jersey City, "A Lesson from Iowa," "More Bushido," and "The Extra Job Evil" are about the best of many appearing regularly in The Post. It is such clear-cut analysis and championing of the principles of democracy that educates the masses in real Americanism as contrasted with Hague's sham dollar-power besmirching of the American flag. Your editorials are a real education in themselves. Even their headings have snap, pep, and humor.

However, what I want to see is every red-blooded American newspaper dump Hague-ism on the President's doorstep and demand that he clean house! This thing is a national stench in the nostrials of decent people. If Roosevelt and the New Deal are going to permit such a person to continue as vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee the sooner we ditch it and them, the better. I am not saying this as a Republican. I am and have been always an independent. I do my own thinking.

Free speech is more important than free lunch. An end must be put to "politics" and political highbinding! The billions of dollars that are being drained in taxes from hard-working people to be used as slush funds to win campaigns for those in favor with high administrative circles is nothing less than a national scandal. I believe in feeding the starving, but if hard-working people are all going to be reduced to the starvation level, who will feed them all?

Norman Thomas was right; we need increased production, not curtailment. We need economic ideas that will put people to work instead of political juggling with public funds. The time has come for this higher-up "two-timing" to cease. The party in power today is getting rotten ripe for a big change. I congratulate The Post on its courageous educational campaign. ARISTOTLE.

Washington, June 9.

"Parasites, Hypocrites."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Allow me to congratulate you for H. I. Phillips' timely and appropriate article of June 8. Never have I seen an article that so well covers both private and public economics.

But where are our money changers, who were to be driven out? How I wish I had the time, means and ability to help you to down the swindling parasites and hypocrites (saying one thing and doing another) out of power.

Can we continue to support such a bankrupting and confiscating Administration any longer? Not I! Impeachment? But how, when both houses have sold out for a mess of porridge? J. H. BENSON.

Rockville, Md., June 8.

Cheers For Hague.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: All honor to Mayor Hague of New Jersey. Jersey City is one place where there have been no riots, no bloodshed and no sit-downs or stay-ins. Wish we had more like him.

CLAUDE WEISS.

Washington, June 12.

Critics And Criticized.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since zero hour, March 4, 1933, it has been a sport too tempting to pass up for the New Deal to malign the money changers in their "temples of greed," make blighting blanket indictment of the selfish few, industrial royalists, the unprincipled brigands of business, skulkers on the fringe of high and low finance, "those who would rule America," and like figments which assail the Deal's apostles after bad spells with the pipe—or the pump.

They have done this, obviously, not just for the kick derived from being liberal, different or non-horse-and-buggy, but because it paid. It got across to the unthinking, the compliant dupes and proclaimed beneficiaries of spree spending, budget balance by rising deficit, and daily courtship of bankruptcy. It spelled votes, power, success to that by which we are now ruled that calls itself democratic government.

But when similar tactics are used, however mildly, against the New Deal, logically based upon its exasperating stupidities that penetrate into every phase of government and control of private activity, a plaintive cry goes up audible to the Russian steppes. An anguished wail in the next oration concocted by the brain trust twins raises charges of destructive criticism, charges that cause suspension of breathing spells and new campaigns of vindictiveness, purges and threats of annihilation and reprisal against "our enemies."

Washington, June 13.

Nationalized Railroads.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A bright proposal comes from the railroad brotherhoods that the ship of state, loaded to the gunwales with debt and about to swamp at the prospect of more, "take over" the roads.

In no other way, the brotherhoods seem to figure—in which they are doubtless right—can hiked scales be made to stand under depression conditions, unless a hook-up is made with a body blithely unconscious of business principles and which prefers deficits.

The proposal has more the aroma of attempted dictatorship than suggestion; ignores the fact that the cut is desired only while the railroads lack means to pay it; that the boost was untimely in the first place, inspired by the "gimme" frenzy of the early 1937 sit-down era, backed up by a supine Government; that the scale was uneconomic as building scales against which the Administration did on occasion utter feeble words of protest—so feeble that no segment of the vote fodder might take offense.

Taxpayers have the right to ask in advance to be delivered from the creation of a new bureau of railroad control and wage awards which in expense and personnel would shrink the I. C. C. to insignificance. However, the tieup is perfect. In muddy thinking the brotherhoods and the Government go hand in hand. E. BARR.

Washington, June 11.

Rice On June 17.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to express my appreciation of the movement by the United Council for Civilian Relief in China for raising funds to assist in rendering aid to the many men, women and children in China suffering from injuries and lack of food and medicinal aid.

I have in mind an idea which I believe might be used by those persons who are unable to attend the Bowl of Rice party to be given in the Raleigh Hotel on June 17. My suggestion is this:

On that day all families who can possibly do so have a vegetable dinner in which rice be included. Such a dinner undoubtedly would not cost as much as would ordinarily be the case, the difference in the cost of the dinner to be donated to this cause.

I should like to hear from anyone who is in sympathy with my suggestion.

ELIZABETH BRADLEY.

Washington, June 8.

The Path Of Business Co-operation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On everybody's lips, the question, What about business? will be answered in a variety of ways by the individual man or woman of whom it is asked. But we do agree that business, capitalizing this word and using it to denote any enterprise run for profit, has been badly crippled for almost a year. Now the huge Federal spending program is shortly to get under way whereby millions of dollars will again be poured into the Nation's industrial arteries.

It must be conceded that when the so-called "pump-priming" methods were utilized in the past to revive business, production and consumption were stimulated. Based on what happened each time new Federal money got into circulation, we can expect another rise in the curves that are indicative of our national prosperity. I shall have to assume, therefore, that business is eager to receive at least the temporary benefits thereof, or else why was not Congress deluged with telegrams of protest against the relief and recovery joint resolution of 1938?

Editorial sentiment was generally opposed to further Federal extravagance, strongly denouncing the reopening of the PWA sluices. It was pointed out that the President was urging Congress solely for political reasons to increase the public debt.

Paradoxical, is it not? Here we had no manifestation of the kind of indignation that might have been expected if public opinion is a true barometer of the citizens' reactions to public affairs. Although many leaders, both in business and professional pursuits, disinterestedly advocated that more Government spending would surely demoralize the body politic, signs of which are appearing already, and that a bankrupt treasury must inevitably ensue, very little attention was apparently paid to their jeremiads. Realistic arguments cannot be refuted except by replacing them with equally concrete statements.

In recent weeks articles in such magazines as Printers' Ink and Fortune have severely castigated business for having failed to cooperate both in its own sphere and with the Government. These articles intimate that non-cooperation may have been one of the reasons for the business recession rather than the stoppage of "pump-priming" funds.

Most people would probably give business the benefit of the doubt when it comes to choosing between what makes for weal or woe in our system of capitalism under democracy. Granted that Washington's preoccupation with the law of supply nad demand has at times amounted to economic legerdemain, how much subtle propaganda designed to undermine administrative policies of a constructive character has business resorted to?

For instance, when Federal statutes were enacted for the protection of unionized workers, free from employer control, many entrepreneurs hired talented lawyers to declare such a law unconstitutional. Similar laws have been on the books in certain European countries for a generation or longer. Are we less progressive in the matter of labor legislation? No, the delay of the United States must be attributed to natural causes.

Perhaps it is impossible for business men to co-operate more among themselves, or for business and Government to fraternize, while the present intransigent attitude of labor remains unchecked. The writer believes that if the National Labor Relations Board exercises proper legal restraint, the disturbances and strife that have plagued the country during the past two years can be eliminated. But in all disputes the board is called upon to probe, a spirit of complete trustfulness is necessary to bring about such a result.

It ought to be patent that far too much energy and time have been fruitlessly wasted to the Nation's detriment; it is only through closer co-operation—working together for a common useful purpose—that we will achieve freedom from economic and political disintegration. Henceforth let all who sincerely desire our democracy to survive rededicate America along the "path of co-operation."

The Post Impressionist

Lost Tribe.

"WE'VE lost it," she said as if that settled it and went back to her monotonous treadling of the sewing machine. "When a latchkey is lost, it's lost."

She saw me as I glanced doubtfully at the crude door, hanging tip-tilted by a piece of worn leather that served as a single hinge. Nothing could be more superfluous than a latchkey in that ramshackle hut in the Canadian woods so, naturally, I was puzzled.

"Not that door," she said.

We had been trying to draw this copper-skinned woman into a friendly conversation for some time without getting much more than "Ugh!" for our efforts. It had seemed the best way to overcome her evident suspicion of the oversized camera we carried and one way or another we had to get that picture. An Indian woman at her sewing machine in a typical Indian hut with only the bare ground for a floor. . . . that was a picture!

But we weren't getting anywhere. We had tried the weather, we had tried other possible approaches to her confidence and favor. But still she remained aloof. Then without warning had come that mysterious observation that a latchkey is lost when it is lost.

"When we left our country the door was slammed behind us," she went on. "We would like to return but we are told that now we are foreign-born and we cannot go back."

Her drooping figure straightened and there was that proud tilt to her head so often associated with the Indian. "We are American Indians—Oneidas. In the Revolution our tribe fought for the colonists at Oriskany and Saratoga. It was an Oneida who tomahawked the Tory, Capt. Butler, saying the while: 'Remember Cherry Valley!' To the Oneidas came Gen. Schuyler asking food for Gen. Washington and his starving army at Valley Forge. The Oneidas gave 600 bushels of grain.

"But after the war the people forgot. They began pushing westward over our lands. Outnumbered and fearful of extinction, some of the Oneidas moved farther west while others crossed the border to the north. Then the door was shut and our latchkey was lost."

We had come for a picture of a modern sewing machine in what we thought an uncivilized setting. But when we had heard this Indian woman's story we lost interest in the picture of this once-prosperous tribe whose arms and wealth the poverty-stricken Continental Army had not been too proud to seek.

Now in the lands once owned by their fathers they had the status of aliens. Once the white man had been on the outside, knocking at the door of America. Now the Indian was on the outside looking for a latchkey to open the door to his ancestral land.

A few days ago I heard that a delegation of Oneidas had been in Washington trying to arrange for the tribe to return to the United States. Whether they can ever come back is doubtful. American immigration laws make no provision for the naturalization of foreign-born Indians. And yet, the Treaty of Canandaigua still exists by which a certain amount of land was restored to the League of Six Nations, of which the Oneidas were members.

Each year, under the terms of this treaty, Congress appropriates money to be expended for clothing and farm implements for the "Six Nations of New York." Because the treaty was made between two powers, as equals, it cannot be dissolved without the consent of both. The Indians in New York have wisely clung to its provisions, refusing citizenship on the grounds that they are a nation within a nation, a separate entity, within the United States.

Perhaps the time will come when the Oneidas, one of the six, will find the lost latchkey and return to claim the privileges provided by the treaty. But United States immigration laws and tribal laws of their own six-nation confederacy make the situation complicated.

Meanwhile, up in the Canadian woods, the Oneida woman waits in her dirt-floored hut and runs her sewing machine, her one touch of white man's civilization.

The Folk Festival.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is to express to you my appreciation of your part in making it possible to hold here the Fifth Annual Folk Festival on May 6, 7 and 8, and in encouraging what I have long believed to be something which fills a deep need in the Nation as a whole, and touches many communities. Perhaps more such projects would help to solve some of the crime problems.

I have long wondered whether these old songs, dances and customs would disappear because of lack of encouragement to this cultural and recreational side of our people, and am happy that leaders are now carrying on and taking action to preserve these things.

The festival here was enjoyed thoroughly so far as my friends and I are concerned and we hope to be able to attend another folk festival either in Washington or elsewhere. All comments I have heard have been favorable.

Speaking Of A Free Press.

IN A COUNTRY which has a free press anyone who has anything to say may become a publisher. There are practical difficulties, to be sure, but the privilege is there, and it is incorrect to say that the owners of the existing newspapers of the familiar and standardized American pattern possess a monopoly of that privilege. That there are individuals who have a message, or think they have one, who remain mute for lack of paper in which to express their ideas is due largely to their own lack of initiative.

PEGLER.

Certainly there are hundreds of persons in Russia, Germany and Italy today who would manage to get their beliefs down on paper and into circulation if those countries offered the same freedom that exists here.

The cost of publishing a standard paper, even in a small city, is enormous, and the enterprise calls for specialized ability in a number of departments—news, editorial, advertising, circulation, purchasing and so forth—which should work together. But a publication intended merely to express a view, need not be so complex. It needs no news service, no photographers, no fleet of wagons, no reporters, no advertising department, even, unless the editor and proprietor wants to abandon pure altruism and turn commercial, in which case he is subject to the same criticism and suspicions that are constantly advanced against the so-called newspaper magnates. It has the same mailing privileges that the existing newspapers enjoy, and has an opportunity to offer those truths which are said to be suppressed.

Unfortunately, even a modest paper requires some money for the printer, and, of course, for the editor's living, but that is just something that cannot be helped. It takes money to start a peanut stand, and the peanut vender has no right to a subsidy for his personal existence from the public Treasury.

• • • •

IN THIS COUNTRY those who want to express themselves on paper seem to believe that a paper must have comics, recipes, health hints, local and world news coverage and blanket circulation. But in Barcelona about three years ago there were, as I recall the number, 80 publications arguing all shades of political opinion, most of them thin sheets without journalistic luxuries, whose editors wrote with perfect abandon. They weren't getting rich, but they certainly were laying it on the line daily, twice weekly, weekly or as often as they had anything to say or the price of publication. They were constantly disappearing and reappearing, and probably not even a newsdealer could have called the roll at any given time.

I have found those who complain most bitterly about supervision and over-or-under emphasis in our papers usually are slightly screwy on some "ism" or hatred and claim a right not only to publish violent communications but to spot them outside, as we say, preferably with a banner head. They want to edit the existing papers, and often when some scurrilous and libelous contribution has been garbaged there will follow a squawk of suppression and a demand for censorship or State regulation, as though that would provide a square deal for all opinion.

A few days' mail of a metropolitan editor would illustrate the point. Letters come in containing the most fantastic general accusations against whole sections of the publication, and the editors are always being accused of selling out to various groups and interests for sordid reasons. A single day's mail will charge that the editor is a tool of Wall Street and Moscow, Hitler and Stalin, the Pope, the Jews, the New Deal and the Liberty League. He is an enemy of labor if he prints a piece plainly reporting some skulduggery by some politician or racketeer who is exploiting a union, and the same mail will accuse him of encouraging the reds when he argues for free speech in some troubled center.

• • • •

I RECEIVE many small publications which if printed in the standard daily papers at all, let alone in page one position, would inflame mobs to commit atrocities against masses of innocent Americans. The screw-ball simply has no sense of truth and will write the most dreadful lies and superstitions as fact and fly into a rage if the editor, with a decent sense of responsibility, does not give him prominent space in which to incite persecution of those whom he hates.

I know our press is imperfect, but I know, too, that our daily standard papers are models of objectivity, conscience and fairness as compared with the letters and the "ism" publications which denounce it for sins apparent in themselves.

Federal Employed Beavers.

("The Department of the Interior plans to spend $300,000 for beavers on Idaho streams."—News item.)

Perceive the busy beavers—
They rarely ever sit;
They're on a U. S. project,
And very new at it!

Their industry's amazing,
They earn each dollar spent—
They haven't found they're working
For any government!

They don't do any leaning,
They do not stand and stare;
It's hard to get a beaver
Who loafs and doesn't care.

They're on the job at daybreak,
They do not quit till night—
They haven't any foreman
Whose zeal for work is slight.

They haven't any bosses
To show up now and then,
And spend a brief five minutes,
Or seldom more than ten.

They know no politicians,
They throw no sudden fit
When notified at noonday
It isn't time to quit.

They haven't ever voted—
I doubt they ever will;
They call nobody "Charlie"—
They call nobody "Bill."

They seem to have ambition,
They seem to find it fun
To tackle any project
And get the damned thing done.

• • • •

I never saw a beaver
Who quite knew how to stall,
But I expect to see 'em
All doing it by fall.

Eyes On America

Every Move In The Present European Crisis Is Made With The United States Taken Heavily Into Account.

By Europax.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

WASHINGTON WOULD BE SURPRISED if it knew the full extent to which America enters into Europe's calculations during these weeks of intercrisis calm. In Paris and London, the United States is not only taken constantly into consideration, but is acknowledged to hold nearly all the best cards in the poker game of world peace.

The pronouncements made in America recently, such as Cordell Hull's Tennessee speech against international lawlessness and isolationism, Sumner Welles' statements and Francis B. Sayre's declarations have had tremendous repercussion in Europe. In Washington, it is quite conceivably thought that, after all, these brave words are very vague and general, and do not indicate any readiness for action on the part of the United States Government. In Paris, however, and to some extent in other European capitals, much meaning is read into them.

To continental eyes, they are deeply significant indications that American opinion is evolving—largely under pressure of events in the Far East—toward a new outlook on world affairs. This evolution is believed to concern two points of particular interest to Europe. The first is a tendency on the part of Washington to abandon the neutrality policy and strict isolationism. The second is an American trend toward lining up with the European democracies against the dictatorships.

Very possibly this view of the American diplomatic scene is exaggerated; It may even be mistaken. But that does not keep it from being of great importance. For, rightly or wrongly, France and Britain think they discern these tendencies in Washington, and they are beginning to shape their own policies accordingly.

Bullitt's Talks With Georges Bonnet.

I WONDER SOMETIMES whether, outside of a few officials in the State Department, it is generally realized in Washington how close is the United States Government's contact with all that is going on now in Europe. Is it known, for instance, that the American Ambassador in Paris, during recent weeks, has been conferring almost daily with France's foreign minister, M. Georges Bonnet? In London, the contact may be less direct, but it is hardly less close.

Even if one admits that this means nothing more than a desire on the part of America's diplomats to keep Washington posted on daily developments in Europe, that is still quite an item. The truth is that over here, at least, America's stake in peace and America's role in war is seen to be hardly less important than that of France or Britain.

A very significant sidelight on this aspect of the question is found in an article in the latest Revue des Deux Mondes, an authoritative French monthly, written by Gen. Bernard Serrigny, an expert on military affairs and especially on motorized fighting. General Serrigny points out that motorization has greatly changed the elements of Europe's military problem. A modern mechanized division of infantry, he says, would require at least 1,800 motor vehicles of various sorts for transport and supply purposes, while an armored car division contains more than 2,200. When tanks are added to these figures, he concludes that the automobile—in its various forms—plays a decisive role in modern warfare, and that the country that can produce the most cars is in a dominant position.

Now, the United States, as Gen. Serrigny emphasizes, turns out more than two-thirds of the whole world's motor cars, while Britain, France, Germany and Italy combined only produce about 17 per cent!

Wars Must Be Waged With Oil From the U. S.

FURTHERMORE, he declares, the United States produces about 75 per cent of all the oil in the world. Now, all the motorized units must be fed with gasoline and oil, and in addition there are thousands of airplanes, ships and submarines which require huge quantities of petroleum products to keep them going. He gives very complete and convincing figures showing that Europe's wartime needs of oil, in its various forms, would total about 70,000,000 tons annually—80,000,000 tons if Japan were included. Now, apart from Soviet Russia and Rumania, no continental country produces oil in any considerable quantity. The principal powers all have reserves sufficient to last two or three months, but not longer. After that time, if motorized warfare is to continue in Europe, it will have to be fought on oil supplied by America.

"Thus one can well appreciate how heavily America would weigh in the balance," writes Gen. Serrigny," not only at the beginning of mobilization but during the whole of the war. And one can see, furthermore, how diligently we should seek her support, or at least her benevolent neutrality."

His final conclusion is equally significant: "The figures I have given show clearly how important will be America's role in the war. She produces, refines and consumes more than three-fourths of the world's oil; she constructs a similar proportion of its automobiles; she dominates the world by her wealth as well as by her great population. If she lends her support to any one of the belligerant nations, she will be mistress of Europe's fate. Those countries to which she refused to supply oil would be in a state of marked and probably decisive inferiority."

"America, owing to its production, the British Empire, because of its naval supremacy, remain the masters of the hour," is Gen. Serrigny's last word. "Notwithstanding all appearances to the contrary, power is still on the side of the liberal and democratic nations. Their disunion alone would entail disaster."

Washington Must Keep Eyes On Europe.

THIS CAN BE TAKEN as a pretty accurate picture of the attitude of the French general staff. It also indicates clearly the views of the French government and the Quai d'Orsay. In fact almost all the government officials and diplomats I have talked with in France recently—and especially since the recent pronouncements coming from the State Department in Washington—were firmly convinced that in case of war, they could count on at least the "benevolent neutrality"—by which they meant the active and exclusive economic support—of the United States.

This may or may not be a well-founded assumption. But at all events, it is a very significant background against which Washington must watch current developments in Europe. There is a division of opinion among European observers as to the trend events are now taking. One view is that the relative calm and detente of recent weeks represents a genuine improvement in the situation resulting from the firm stand of Britain and France which "called Hitler's bluff" over Czechoslovakia. Another view, perhaps more prevalent in well-informed quarters, is that this is but the "calm before the storm."

Certainly the French Foreign Office is inclined to believe that the latter is the correct diagnosis. The Quai d'Orsay is definitely apprehensive, feeling that the latter half of June will bring forth a series of grave international crises, either over Czechoslovakia or Spain, or more likely both, with complications in the Far East thrown in for good measure.

There are many careful students of foreign affairs here who feel that the bomb that breaks the camel's back will fall from a Japanese airplane. The air bombings of French and British ships in Spain, as well as the bombardment of the Spanish open towns and civil populations by Franco's German and Italian aviators is definitely linked here with the Japanese atrocities in Canton and elsewhere in China. They proceed from the same totalitarian concept of warfare.

Outlook For Peace Is Now Gloomy Indeed.

TO SUM UP BRIEFLY: It is hard to avoid the conclusion that Europe is, at best, no nearer to real peace and tranquillity. On the contrary, the tension between the democratic and dictatorial blocs continues acute and, worse still from America's point of view, is tending to spread beyond Europe to Asia and the Americas, beyond the Mediterranean to the Pacific. There are, of course, other more cheerful and encouraging sides to the picture; war is by no means inevitable. But at the moment it cannot be denied that the general outlook for peace in Europe in anything but bright.

New Clouds Over Czechoslovakia.

THE THIRD and final series of municipal elections in Czechoslovakia passed off last Sunday with the same minimum of disorder that has characterized the others.

The results of the latest polling contain no surprises. They merely confirm an already revealed trend.

Thus the Nazi faction headed by Konrad Henlein can now prove that it has the support of over 90 per cent of the German element in Czechoslovakia. On the other hand the strength of the government was revealed in two ways.

One was the drawing together of elements backing President Benes and Premier Hodza in their efforts to preserve Czechoslovakia's independence and territorial integrity. The second development was a decline in the electoral strength of Father Hlinka's Slovak autonomist party. No doubt now remains that Czechs and Slovaks alike are averse to having whatever differences there may be between them exploited by enemies of Czechoslovakia.

• • • •

SO FAR as Czechoslovakia's internal situation is concerned, therefore, the outlook for a settlement of the German minority problem would seem to be favorable. While Henlein finds himself in a position to speak for the overwhelming majority of Czechoslovak Germans, Premier Hodza still can speak as the representative of a majority of all the inhabitants of the country. And there is every reason to believe that the Prague government is prepared to go to every reasonable limit in meeting the legitimate claims of the various groups which are demanding autonomy.

But it is not certain that Henlein is in a position to be equally reasonable. He receives orders from Berlin, and Berlin, it is apparent, has no great interest in the satisfaction of Sudeten German aspirations as such. What the Nazi government wants is either the complete destruction of Czechoslovakia as an independent state or, alternatively, its acceptance of German control over its foreign policy. Under the circumstances, therefore, it is to Germany's advantage to keep the Sudeten question alive and it can easily be kept alive by constant agitation directed against any reasonable settlement.

GERMANY'S strategy with regard to Czechoslovakia appears at the moment one of playing for time while keeping the fires of controversy raging. Last month the possibility of a military coup against the Prague regime was averted by Czechoslovakia's prompt, efficient and far-reaching mobilization measures and the strong stand taken on her behalf by France and Great Britain. It is now revealed, for instance, that the French government actually had general mobilization orders all ready for distribution. In the face of such a show of force Berlin backed down. Hitler does not want a general war.

This does not mean, however, that the Third Reich has any intention of abandoning its ambitions with regard to Czechoslovakia. Should the European situation again be favorable to a lightning stroke by the German army as was the case in the Austrian situation the same procedure might again be employed, this time against Czechoslovakia.

• • • •

IS THAT TIME again in the offing? The speech made by former Premier Flandin in which he opposed any French aid to Czechoslovakia may no doubt encourage the Nazis in their attacks on the Prague government. Perhaps equally encouraging to their ambitions is the attitude displayed by the British government in the face of the continued destruction of British shipping in Spanish republican ports. It will be argued that if the erstwhile "Mistress of the Seas" permits this she will permit anything.

In any event there is the ominous fact that the Nazi press and Nazi leaders again are indulging in vituperation against Czechoslovakia. Thus at Stettin, Germany, Rudolf Hess, deputy Nazi party leader, inferentially accused Czechoslovakia of being a menace to the peace of Europe.

Czechoslovakia's crimes are apparently three in number. In the first place she owes her existence to "the sham of Versailles." Secondly, she is unable to preserve peace and order within its boundaries. And, above all, Czechoslovakia had the effrontery to mobilize in behalf of her independence without first obtaining Hitler's consent.

Thus the stage is set for any drastic measures the Berlin government may choose to take against its neighbor.

Streamlining The Potato

The work of the professional plant breeder is not designed to aid the farmer alone. "Streamlining" of cars has been followed by the idea of the streamlined potato. Such a variety is one of the chief goals of potato specialists everywhere.

This streamlining is the elimination of deep eyes that cause such waste during peeling. Besides being more economical, the newer shallow-eyed varieties may be peeled with greater speed. Like the streamlining of cars, the elimination of deep eyes in potatoes is a gradual process. Our latest varieties are improvements, but still shallower eyes may be expected in later models.

Beneath A Bishop

The Bishop of Salisbury (Dr. Neville Lovett), speaking at an Air Raid Precautions meeting at Salisbury last night, said he would offer a private bomb-proof shelter beneath his palace to the citizens of Salisbury. He had shown the shelter to the local Air Raid Precaution officer, and the heaviest bomb could not penetrate there. Anything that the A. R. P. officer suggested should be done to the place to make it a proper shelter for the people of Salisbury he would be only too glad to do. If the time came when it had to be used he would be only too proud to think that he had been able to do something in the circumstances.

In These Fertile Fields

This is a dreary field,
No silken tassels of corn
Toss like softest hair
On the breath of wind.

This is a quiet field,
No sound of autumn leaves
Stirs on the barren oaks.
No shafts of golden grain
Bend on the distant hill.

This is a strange field,
Bearing a stranger crop.
White crosses sown in rigid rows
Yield no harvest
Under the warm sun.
These crosses are barren seeds
Of a fruitless harvest sown.
And on the distant hill,
Where golden banners of grain
Once blew in the wind,
Rusty cannons point to the flaming west,
Forboding sentinels over the fertile fields.

These are silent fields,
Musty and sad with the blunders
Of human kind.
No plow shall furrow this land,
No hand shall sow
Rich seeds to the fertile soil.

These are the battlefields,
These are the fields of death;
They shall bear no more.

Opposition To Mr. Roosevelt In Seventy-Fifth Congress Came Mainly From Within His Own Party.

By Mark Sullivan.

THE OUTSTANDING FEATURE of the Congress closing was the relation between it and the President. This Congress was elected in the same election that gave to President Roosevelt an unparalleled victory, carrying all but two States. The Congress that came in with him was similarly unparalleled. In the Senate, Mr. Roosevelt's party had 75 out of 96; in the House, 333 out of 435.

SULLIVAN.

To speculate upon what a President might have done with such a predominance in Congress would be a futile toying with an historical "if." The fact is that after Mr. Roosevelt had had this power in Congress for 32 days, he, on February 5, 1937, asked the Congress to give him what, if given, would have amounted to dominance over the Supreme Court and all the Federal courts.

To say this proposal split Mr. Roosevelt's party in Congress in half is inadequate. From that day, only a minority of Mr. Roosevelt's party believed in him or was willing to follow him. True, slightly more than a half of Mr. Roosevelt's party in the Senate supported his Court proposal; only by aid of all the 16 Republicans was the Court proposal rejected. But many Democratic Senators who went along with Mr. Roosevelt on the Court proposal did so with utter unwillingness and dismay.

The rejection of Mr. Roosevelt's Court proposal in the Senate was followed in the House by rejection of another proposal that would have given him much additional power, the bill for the reorganization of the executive departments. Another measure desired by Mr. Roosevelt, the wage and hour bill, was also rejected by the House.

Thus, during the early months of the present year, a President whose party had much more than two-thirds of the Senate and much more than two-thirds of the House had nevertheless lost his leadership of both bodies. This leadership he recovered to a large degree. Under pressure from him, the House actually reversed itself on the wage and hour bill. It passed, in May (in a much changed form, to be sure) by a vote of 314 to 97, the wage and hour bill which in December it had rejected by a vote of 216 to 198.

Session Paralleled By Business Decline.

THIS REGAINING OF POWER in Congress by Mr. Roosevelt is practically without procedent. So rarely as to be practically never does a President in his second term regain a once-lost control over Congress. Mr. Roosevelt's feat is the more remarkable in that economic conditions were unfavorable to him. Simultaneously with the action that lost Mr. Roosevelt his control of Congress, his attempt to change the courts, a business depression began and continues increasingly until this day.

That, under all the conditions, the President should regain his control of Congress, is remarkable. For his good fortune, the reason lay largely in one event, a primary election in one State. In Florida, a Senator, Mr. Pepper, running for renomination on a record of substantially 100 per cent support of Mr. Roosevelt's measures, coupled with promise of similar support in the future, won his renomination by so large a majority as to be, under the circumstances, striking. It created a strong impression that the President was still popular.

In all politics and all history, there is much that is fortuitous. Other primaries in other States, following soon after the Florida one, had outcomes from which no such impression favorable to Mr. Roosevelt would have been deduced. In one primary, in Iowa, an attempt by Mr. Roosevelt's intimate lieutenants, almost certainly with Mr. Roosevelt's approval, to prevent renomination of a Senator who had opposed his Court proposal, Mr. Gillette, was disastrously defeated.

The Iowa primary was held June 6, the Florida one had been held a month before, May 3. Had those two dates been reversed, had the Iowa primary occurred on May 3, we should probably not now be recording that Mr. Roosevelt regained control of his party in Congress. On the contrary, we might readily be saying that Mr. Roosevelt's bare loss of control at the beginning became a rout toward the end.

New Deal Party Vs. The Democratic Party.

THE CONFLICT between the President and Congress had the appearance of a seesaw struggle for dominance between, on the one hand, a strong leader in the White House ambitious for more and more power, and, on the other hand, a Congress determined to recover its status as a co-equal branch of government.

But something else went on, too. The opposition to Mr. Roosevelt came mainly from his own party. Quite possibly Mr. Roosevelt would have had little trouble if he had stayed within the bounds of traditional Democratic policy. This gives an additional significance to the resistance to him. One might say that Mr. Roosevelt sought to impose a new philosophy on the Democratic party, that the Democratic leaders in Congress felt outraged, and that the stake in the tug-of-war that has ensued is whether the Democratic party is to survive, or whether it is to be swallowed up by a new party, the New Deal party. That tug-of-war is still on. Viewed in this light, the outcome of the nomination and election of a new Congress this summer and fall may be a major turning-point in our history.

Angell Holds U. S. Planning Is Stupid

Philadelphia, June 15 (AP).—Dr. James R. Angell, former president of Yale University, asserted today the "requisite intelligence" necessary for long range planning in the United States Government "certainly is not" available at present.

He told the graduating class at the University of Pennsylvania changes in the Government were being fostered by persons "obviously developing a philosophy . . . alien to the basic conceptions of our traditional democracy.

"That all these long time controls thus far attempted have gone on the rocks, are met with the necessity of frequent and radical alterations, does not discourage the self-complacent vanity in which they are conceived."

Dr. Angell was awarded an honorary degree of doctor of laws at the commencement.

Hillman described the act as "a pioneering venture in the field of Federal legislation," and took issue with Alfred P. Sloan, chairman of the board of General Motors Corporation, who attacked the measure in a letter mailed stockholders with dividend checks. He called Sloan's action "unfortunate."

Veto Message Of President

President Roosevelt's message, vetoing the land bank interest bill, follows:

To the House of Representatives:

I return herewith, without my approval, H. R. 10330, entitled "An act to extend for two additional years the 3½ per centum interest rate on certain Federal land-bank loans, and to provide for a 4 per centum interest rate on land bank commissioner's loans until July 1, 1940."

Section 1 of the bill extends for two additional years beginning July 1, 1938, the 3½ per cent interest rate on certain Federal land-bank loans.

Section 2 of the bill extends for approximately one year, that is, from July 22, 1939, to June 30, 1940, the 4 per cent interest rate on land bank commissioner loans.

Section 1. Federal Land-Bank Loans.

The question presented by the proposed legislation is not whether Federal land-bank borrowers shall be required during the coming year to pay interest on their Federal land-bank loans at the full rates specified in their mortgage contracts; the question is the amount of reduction that shall be effected. Since the average contract rate of interest on outstanding Federal land-bank loans is approximately 5 per cent, the emergency 4 per cent rate provided for under present law would mean an average interest reduction of 20 per cent to Federal land-bank borrowers during the fiscal year 1939. It amounts to an average reduction of approximately 28 per cent in the case of those borrowers whose contract rates of interest exceed 5 per cent. Thus if this bill does not become law there will still be savings to borrowers amounting to from 20 per cent to 28 per cent.

The interest reductions granted to Federal land bank borrowers will have involved upon the expiration of the present provisions of law in July, 1939, a total cost to the Treasury estimated at approximately $143,500,000. If H. R. 10530 becomes the law, the total cost to the Treasury to June 30, 1940, is estimated at $183,900,000.

The burden of interest charges on a typical farmer who refinanced his 6 per cent private loan with a Federal land bank in 1933 would appear to be less on the basis of present prices, and the emergency Federal land bank interest rate of 4 per cent provided under present law less than the burden which was carried by the same farmer on his old loan during the period 1910-14 or during the period 1921-30.

As of March 31, 1938, approximately 86 per cent of all loans of the Federal land banks were in good standing as opposed to approximately 50 per cent delinquency when the emergency legislation was first passed.

Section 2. Land Bank Commissioner Loans.

A reduced rate of interest land bank commissioner loans was first provided for by the act of July 22, 1937, which fixed the rate at 4 per cent for a period of two years from the date of its enactment. Under the provisions of H. R. 10530 the emergency 4 per cent rate would be continued from July 22, 1939, to June 30, 1940. There would appear to be no substantial reason for establishing at this time a policy with respect to the interest rate on land bank commissioner loans for the period beginning July 22, 1939.

The total cost to the Treasury of interest reductions on land bank commissioner loans to the expiration of the date of the existing act, July 21, 1939, is estimated at $16,500,000. If the 4 per cent rate is extended to June 30, 1940, an additional expense of $8,300,000 is estimated.

Adding the expense of interest reductions on land bank commissioner loans to the estimated cost of such reductions on Federal land bank loans, the total cost to the Treasury upon the expiration of the provisions of existing law in July, 1939, would approximate $160,000,000. If H. R. 10530 becomes law, the total cost to the Treasury to June 30, 1940, on both Federal land bank and land bank commissioner loans is estimated at $298,700,000.

For all these reasons, I am constrainec to withhold my approval of the bill, H. R. 10530.

Europe Needs Wheat of U. S., Wallace Finds

Might Take Surplus Here; Sayre Urges Drive to Sell Cotton Abroad.

The possibility of an additional foreign market for 100,000,000 bushels of surplus American wheat this year was held out yesterday.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace said at his press conference that a department survey showed the European wheat crop, excluding Russia, might be 100,000,000 or more bushels less than a year ago. Whether the shortage abroad might be utilized in disposing of the expected huge oversupply here has not been determined, he added, though representatives of the Agriculture and State departments are canvassing the possibilities. Ability of European countries to pay for imports from this country would be a factor.

The greatest shortages abroad, he reported, are in Italy and Spain.

Cleveland, Miss., June 15 (AP).—Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre told Southern cotton planters, processors and State officials gathered here today to organize a national cotton council, that the only sound, permanent solution for the cotton problem was to build increased markets at home and abroad through the Government trade-agreements program.

The Assistant Secretary called on the South to forget "sectional attitudes and interests" and to join other sections in a program to aid the whole Nation.

Impounding of surpluses by the Government was no solution, he said.

May Flood U. S. Marts.

"Loss of foreign markets means American surpluses unsalable, production stopped or reduced, the threat of depressed prices for the entire output through flooding of domestic markets," he said.

He traced growth of trade barriers by big powers following the economic crash of 1929, which, he declared, caused shrinkage of our exports from $5,157,0000,000 in 1929 to $1,647,000,000 in 1933.

"In the past," Dr. Sayre said, "the South has sold within the United States less than half its annual cotton production. If foreign markets are lost for American cotton, ruin faces the South. How, then, can farmers engaged in producing surplus cotton crops secure an adequate living?

May Work Two Ways.

"The problem may be attacked from either side—through curtailment of production, or through the building up of increased markets at home and abroad, or again the attack may be made from both sides simultaneously."

Dr. Sayre scored proposed export subsidies as a method for winning foreign markets, and declared.

"The soundest and most effective way to increased markets at home and abroad is to remove or reduce extensive and economically unjustifiable trade barriers which have been disastrously blocking trade highways of the world."

He said 17 trade agreements had been concluded with countries accounting for 40 per cent of the United States' total foreign trade, and that other negotiations were in progress, and asserted that since inauguration of the program foreign trade had approximately doubled.

AFTERNOON UNDER THE TERROR.

As I strode up to the plate, swinging my bat, I was worrying a little about wages and hours . . . In fact, I was in a brown study; so I swung at the first pitched ball and hit it over Representative Ham Fish's head. He was playing second base for the Congressmen, a big broth of a boy.

* * * *

Hon. Ham Fish. . . . All-American.

Actually, I'm not sure whether there were two men on base or three. As I galloped down to first base the TVA probe was on my mind and there seemed to be five or six men on base, and seven or eight infielders, all of them moving in circles and getting in my way.

* * * *

The only reason I'm going into this at all is that a few of the 3,200,000 noble Americans who read this column in 27 newspapers (from Boston to Los Angeles) seem to be interested in that two-bagger I hit in the game against the House of Representatives that afternoon when I couldn't seem to keep my thoughts off the lend-and-spend bill.

"—The Hon. Ham Fish lunged at it"

Their attitude seems to range from mild skepticism to sheer incredulity. Not about the arms embargo, mind you; about my two-bagger . . . So I must go into some detail. I remember, as I rounded first base, that I was a little nervous about having hit that ball at the Hon. Ham Fish, who had aspired to the Presidency as recently as 1936.

* * * *

He's a big, muscular chap; it says in the Congressional Directory (I wonder who put it in) that he was once captain of the Harvard football team and an All-American; and I would have to pass right by him on my way to second base. He had made a futile lunge at the ball and would be in a nasty mood, too; and I was trying to figure out who'd be President Roosevelt's next Supreme Court choice.

* * * *

There was a queer look in Mr. Fish's eye as I sashayed past him, and I think he would have lunged at me, too, in a flying tackle, if Gene Tunney, who was umpiring, hadn't looked at him severely. Gene is getting comfy around the belt line but is still a match for a 1908 All-American, even one as fit as Ham Fish. "The NLRB is certainly catching it these days!" I said to myself as I ambled on to second base.

* * * *

I could easily have stretched it to a three-bagger, but I decided to stop at second base and concentrate for a few minutes on President Roosevelt's attitude toward American business. Behind third base I could see three Congressmen with beer bottles in their hands, yelling at their pitcher to give him the dark one, so I thought I'd be safer where I was anyhow, for the time being.

"—The MC's mob Gene Tunney"

Right here, just as I had the President's attitude almost figured out, the next newspaperman at bat hit another one at the Hon. Ham Fish, prowling around second base like a caged lion. "It won't be any too pleasant around here if he fumbles it!" I reflected. I remembered hearing the Hon. Ham Fish say one day at a luncheon that all the Fishes were liberal, he in particular; so I raced for third and the beer bottles like the Hon. Sol Bloom trying to elude a photographer.

* * * *

As I slid into third base standing up, it flashed into my mind that Maury Maverick might be President some day . . . I'd been a little shaky all day. The thought brought me up short; in a country guided by President Maverick there would be some adjustments to make. I looked pleadingly at the Congressmen with beer, but they seemed to be sighting at the sun through their bottles . . . Under President Maverick, harnessing the Passamaquoddy tides and digging a Florida ship canal would be as easy as building a postoffice in a Senator's home town.

* * * *

So I just stood there, trying to remember what it was the President had said in his monopoly message about insurance companies, when a lot of members of Congress rushed out to argue with Gene Tunney about a close decision at first base. (Or it might have been the inning before.) They milled around, shaking their fists, getting his autograph and making one-minute speeches. I stole home, but no one was looking, so I went back to third base.

* * * *

Tunney took a short uppercut at a bee that was buzzing around and all the Congressmen galloped off the field as if on their way to collect mileage . . . I never did find out what became of all the men who had been on base. A man in a green sweatshirt told me to go home; home; so I interrupted my meditations about the Supreme Court's decision in the Tompkins case and singlefooted across the plate. That is how I hit a two-bagger, gentlemen, so help me. I have written this account so posterity will know how we relaxed in the time of the terrior . . And have I ever told you how I almost tackled Chick Mahan, of Harvard, in the open field, just before he made a touchdown?

Masonic and Eastern Star Home Holds Tent Show at Stadium

America Held Pacing Fascists In Aid to Japan

Dr. Chih Meng Tells Body Here U. S. Gasoline Is in Nippon Bombers.

America and other democracies were accused of being greater allies of Japan than the fascist nations, by Dr. Chih Meng, Chinese educator, in a speech last night before the Academy of World Economics.

Dr. Meng, director of the Chinese Institute in America and in charge of the Chinese Educational Mission to the United States, spoke before the Academy in the second session of its sixteenth meeting, held at the Chamber of Commerce building.

Fascist nations, he said, are sending Japan war supplies in only moderate amounts, but America and other democracies are supplying gasoline and oil, and metals. He said Japanese bombing planes attacking Chinese civilians, are powered by a "well-known brand of American gasoline."

Japan Uses U. S. Copper.

"It is in your power to withhold these supplies of gas," he told the audience. He implied that Japan was using American copper in the manufacture of shells for explosives.

Dr. Meng called economic results of the Chinese-Japanese war a "case of murder and suicide," asserting that Japan will inevitably sink to a third-rate power because of the Chinese campaign, and that China herself has been hurt enormously by the war. He said war came just at the time China was beginning to show strength industrially and financially.

The Chinese campaign, he continued, is a "result of Japan's political policy rather than the pressure of her economic situation." He said the present policy was first outlined in 1870, before Japan's population or lack of resources constituted economic problems.

He asserted that the Nipponese had been unsuccessful in trying to control newly conquered territory, to utilize China's resources. "Japan's authority does not extend beyond the reach of its guns," he said. "She is unable to maintain order."

He was introduced by Dr. D. O. Kinsman, professor of economics at American University. Members of the panel who questioned the speaker following his address were Drs. Wesley M. Gewher of American University; Lin Lin of the Chinese Council for Economic Research; Josef Solterer of Georgetown University and Amos Taylor of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Lola Sanders Sings.

Mrs. LaVergne Fairchild, soprano soloist at Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South, last night presented Lola Sanders in a song recital at Glen Eden, home of Mrs. Henry Glenwright, near Takoma Park. Miss Sanders was assisted by Stanley Dombrosky and accompanied by Ora Gibbons.

Dwarf Dances as Performers Fly Through Air on Trapeze

Clowns Jabber, Cockatoos Troupe With Discipline of Soldiers; Then Follow Fireworks, Ball Game, Band Concert.

A bow-legged dwarf, 34 inches tall, danced beneath the floodlights at Griffith Stadium, his face smeared with grease paint. High above the outfield trapeze performers swung and spun. A troupe of trained white cockatoos showed the discipline of soldiers, and did not flinch even when their master fired a toy pistol. A slim boy and girl skated in noiseless difficult figures, and a Japanese performer held his wife aloft as she balanced on her back atop a long silvery pole. The clowns jabbered and carried on the traditions of the "big tops."

The occasion was the big circus given last night before 25,000 spectators for the benefit of the Masonic and Eastern Star Home. Earlier in the evening the stadium resounded to the marching feet of units of Masonry and allied organizations in full uniform. And later, when the last act of the circus was done, fireworks trailed red fingers down the sky, obscuring the moon.

A baseball game between a team from the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Potomac Electric Power Co. started the affair at 5 o'clock. The boys from Mr. Hoover's office won, 3 to 1.

Children playing with matches started a fire that swept the basement and part of the first floor of an apartment house at 533 Peabody street northwest yesterday. Firemen were two hours in extinguishing the blaze. Damage was estimated at "several thousand dollars."

Four apartments on the ground floor were partially destroyed. They are occupied by O. F. Baker, Walter Frederick, M. R. Harrington and Lewis Rudden.

Curran Urges Defender for Poor in Court

Needy Inadequately Cared for in Crime Trials, Bar Units Told.

Appointment of a public defender, "because the poor are inadequately represented in criminal court," was asked yesterday by Judge Edward M. Curran.

Speaking at a joint meeting of the junior sections of the District of Columbia Bar Association and the Women's Bar Association, he declared, "Justice must be too expensive for the poor when involved in criminal cases, because men unrepresented by counsel, who should be acquitted, are convicted in our courts today."

Judge Nathan Cayton, father of the Small Claims Court, extolled the work of that division.

Provision of public legal counsel for defendants financially unable to secure it otherwise, would mean no loss of income to practicing members of the legal profession, Judge Curran said.

He declared, furthermore, that the declaration "the State should not both prosecute and defend," had no bearing in the matter, because "organized society should be as interested in freeing the innocent as in convicting the guilty.

Judge Cayton remarked that the large number of cases, "each for a small amount, but of great importance to the parties concerned," settled since establishment of the small claims court was evidence of its value to people of extremely limited financial means."

He added that methods of conciliation and arbitration of cases authorized by the law setting up the court had proved their value during existence of the new unit, and gave promise of growing both in frequency of use and in expediting justice.

Helen Reynolds Will Seek $2,000 Monthly in Suit

New York, June 15 (AP).—Eli Johnson, attorney for Mrs. Helen Fortescue Reynolds, today said she would seek $2,000 a month and counsel fees in a separation action against Julian Louis Reynolds, her husband.

Johnson said a hearing would be held in the New York Supreme Court June 21. The action, he said, will be based on charges of cruelty. Johnson confirmed reports that the couple's year-old son, Richard Roland Reynolds, had been taken by his nurse to Richmond, Va.

Reynolds is connected with a Chicago corporation which manufactures tinfoil for cigarettes.

Mrs. Reynolds is the younger sister of Mrs. Thalia Fortescue Massie, divorced wife of a naval officer, who figured in a sensational attack and murder case in Hawaii six years ago. She was married to Reynolds in July, 1936.

One of the unused portable buildings at Lafayette School will be moved to the Stanton School.

Dr. Dorothy Boulding Ferebee was appointed to a vacancy on the advisory committee on vocational education. The vacancy was created by the resignation of Mrs. V. R. McGuire, new member of the Board.

The board granted the Health Department permission to use school buildings for the physical examinations to be given approximately 2,000 employables in connection with investigation of relief in the District.

Won't Divert Motor Funds, Nice Promises

Maryland Governor Cuts Ribbon at New Hampshire Ave., University Lane.

Gov. Harry W. Nice yesterday declared that Maryland isn't going to divert any more gasoline funds to purposes other than building roads while he is Governor. He spoke just before he cut the ribbon which opened New Hampshire avenue extension to University lane.

"It has not been an easy matter to avoid diverting gasoline taxes. Once you've started you've got to keep right on robbing Peter to pay Paul. It started before Lansdale (referring to State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, who shared the speakers' platform) and I first breathed the breath of authority."

The Governor said that he had favored a constitutional amendment to prohibit diversion of gasoline funds, but that Senator Sasscer "had the faith of Israel" in the Legislature and had been satisfied with a law prohibiting such diversion.

Sasscer Speaks.

Senator Sasscer pointed out that new territory opened up by the road should increase the taxable base of Maryland.

The Senator declared that the metropolitan area of Prince Georges and Montgomery counties, with a combined population of more than 100,000, is the largest metropolitan gathering in Maryland outside of Baltimore.

He decried diversion of gasoline taxes and said he had been astounded to learn that 35 States and the District of Columbia had diverted such taxes.

The two gubernatorial aspirants were introduced by Dr. H. H. Votaw of the General Conference of Seventh Day Adventists.

The exercises were held under auspices of the Takoma Park Chamber of Commerce and the Washington Board of Trade, as well as several civic groups of the community.

Others who spoke were Oliver W. Youngblood, president of the Takoma Park Chamber of Commerce; the Rev. R. Paul Schearrer, pastor of the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church; Mayor John R. Adams of Takoma Park; J. Glenn Beall, member of the Maryland State roads commission; Harry W. McNamee, president of the Prince Georges board of county commissioners; County Commissioner Paul M. Coughlin, of Montgomery County; Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways for the District of Columbia; Francis G. Addison, president of the Washington Board of Trade; T. Howard Duckett, member of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission; the Rev. Richard J. Barron, pastor, Our Lady of Sorrows Catholic Church, of Takoma Park; Dr. Llewellyn Jordan and Nathan L. Smith, chief engineer of the Maryland State roads commission, and others.

Gov. Nice, assisted by Miss Doris Nichols, Miss Edith Beber, Miss Jean Daggett and Miss Helen Rundvold, cut the ribbon which barred the road to traffic.

National 4-H Encampment Opens in Capital Today

169 Rural Boys and Girls To Attend 4-H Camp Opening

The vanguard of 169 rural boys and girls who will attend the twelfth annual national 4-H encampment, opening today, began making themselves at home in a tent city in West Potomac Park late yesterday with one chief anticipation—the visit by Mrs. Roosevelt today.

The First Lady is scheduled to address the campers at 10:30 a. m. today in the agriculture auditorium. The 169 boys and girls—chosen for their club work in farming or home projects—represent 43 States and will remain in camp a week.

Center of attention yesterday was Emil Koehn, with 10-gallon hat and high boots. Emil, a Texan, is 16 years old. And what he can do with leather is demonstrated on one whole side of a big tent. Emil didn't seem to think it was much, but the other club members did. He can turn out a harness like a machine, and can make a quirt to move any stubborn hoss.

The early arrivals were taken, also, by the elaborate pottery kiln being set up under Department of Agriculture supervision. Demonstrations begin today.

This is the first year that extensive exhibits have been placed. The PWA has a tent, and some Texas women are demonstrating fine leather work. There also is a weaving exhibit.

Afternoons will be devoted to an educational tour. Scheduled speakers, besides Mrs. Roosevelt, are Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Harry L. Brown, Dr. Alfred Bilmanis, Minister from Latvia; Allen Eaton, rural art authority, from the Russell Sage Foundation; Willis R. Gregg, chief, Weather Bureau; F. A. Silcock, Forest Service chief; Miss Josephine Roche, formerly of the Treasury Department, and others.

Union Employes Taxfree.

Employes of credit unions in the District were exempted from social security taxes by a ruling of the Bureau of Internal Revenue yesterday.

Get at the Cause of Constipation!
You know that constipation often gives you that dopey, sunken, bogged down feeling, why not get at the cause?
If you eat what most people do—things like bread, meat and potatoes—the chances are all that's the matter with you is you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean what you may think. It's a kind of food that isn't entirely digested, but leaves a soft, bulky mass in the intestines that aids elimination.
If this is your trouble, what you need is a dish of crisp, crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day. It contains the "bulk" you need, plus Nature's intestinal tonic vitamin B and iron.
Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and see if the old world doesn't look a lot brighter! All-Bran is made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

The organization voted to continue sponsoring a division of the Community Chest. Mrs. John M. Sternhagen was named chairman of the division. Mrs. Emory Scott Land, first vice president, presided.

Wild Burros' Sad Chicken Feed Fate Arouses Concern

A New Deal for burros became a likelihood yesterday.

From the Interior Department came a press memorandum saying:

"Thousands of wild burros, whose ancestors played important roles in stirring dramas of the torrid Panamint Valley in southern California, written by Bret Harte and Mark Twain, today are suffering the ignominious fate of being ground up for chicken feed in Los Angeles slaughter houses. Secretary of the Interior Ickes was advised by Commissioner Fred W. Johnson, of the General Land Office."

It added the information that George Francis, district attorney of Inyo County, Calif., had urged the department to stop the practice of hunters fencing off the springs and water holes and then swooping down on the thirsty burros and carting them off to the chicken-feed factories.

The animals were described as "valuable alike to prospectors and as local color for visiting tourists."

Interior's division of investigation has been asked to report on means of saving them.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

If Lovers, Separated by Fate, Meet After Long Years, Will Their Love Still Be Alive?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Can a mature man and woman who have loved intensely, and who have separated because of circumstances beyond their control, meet after years of separation and still care? This love was founded on sympathetic understanding, kindness, mutual interests and physical attraction. It is possible that in several years circumstances may be favorable and marriage possible, and this writer has been wondering how much likelihood there would be of both persons still caring. WONDERING.

* * * *

DEAR WONDERING: I daresay no mature person can read your letter without registering a half sigh and a wistful smile, for this question of whether or not an intense mutual attachment of yesteryear could meet the test of future meeting after long separation is one that gives the majority of men and women food for speculation at some time or other in their lives. Probably in the greater number of cases, the result of such a meeting is mutual disenchantment; in a lesser number, half sad and wholly disappointing surprise for the one and a renewal of heartbreak in varying degrees for the other; and, in a very small minority of cases, the miraculos discovery that the long-ago frustrated relationship is still as rich in potentialities as ever it was.

* * * *

The fact that this devotion whose longevity you question came into being between a man and woman of mature age, and that it seemed complementary on every front—i. e.: there was mutual understanding common interests and physical attraction—suggests that it has considerable chance of weathering the passage of years. However, the emotionally vital man or woman—the person most capable of deep devotion and fine allegiance—is not the sort of person who locks his heart away in a strong box and withdraws emotionally from life, in the face of such a romantic deprivation. And there is the catch.

* * * *

In such instances of disappointed love as the above, it is, in my opinion, a serious and sentimental mistake for either party to drag out a lonely, frustrated present existence on the assumption that the future will yield him a specific heart's desire that the past denied. I believe it is far more wholesome, a much better risk, to make a cheerful, indefatigable effort to adjust himself to a future that reserves no place for restoration of past loss.

It is this type of high-hearted resiliency which makes for lasting attractiveness in any individual, because it is the quality which begets continuous development of spirit, personality and character. And when two persons who have loved each other meet once again after long separation, they are both eager and afraid to discover what the years have done to each other. They are not looking for "the same old Jane," or "the same old John," but for the greater fulfillment of those qualities they first loved and admired in the other. Though they may be hoping for the best, they are dreading the worst; and if the second encounter is to be vital with new promise, the years which led up to it must have been for each vital with socially and emotionally outgoing experiences. M. H.

The Symptoms of Love!

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Your answer to the letter signed "Besperate," published in Sunday's Post, got under my skin. Because the man she loves has never given her any tangible reason to suppose he loves her in return—because her only encouragement is the whispering of intuition—you conclude that he "is not and never has been romantically interested in her," and that her love for him is not real but imaginary.

* * * *

I am not trying to criticize you, Miss Haworth, but I do feel sorry for you and a little pity, too, that you have never known real love. It is such a lovely experience that it seems a shame you have missed it. Your reply to "Desperate" proved that you know very little about love, you know. Have you never met the man who could make you feel dizzy and shaken, merely by looking at you? Have you never met the man who entered a room and by that act changed the entire atmosphere of the room for you?

* * * *

Have you never been lonely and dead at heart when away from the man for a week? Have you never met a man who seemed to change your life? Who made your name sound unexpectedly beautiful when when he spoke it aloud the first time? Who made you instantly aware of his presence even though he entered a room filled with 50 or 60 people? Whose quiet presence gave you a sense of utter peacefulness?

* * * *

Oh, I could mention a thousand things which tell a woman that she is in love; but you wouldn't understand them until you had experienced them, and then I would have no need to tell you. I know whereof I speak, for I speak from memory of an experience that took place in 1914. For six years I worked in an office for a man who had loved me for five years and who never told me until I was leaving. I was standing at the window, and he was speaking of his plans for the new secretary who was to follow me. His voice sounded hurt and crushed. Then he held my coat, and I saw tears in his eyes . . .

* * * *

My husband and I are very happy and have five grand children but even today I can remember—almost feel—that man's arms around me and the way he was saying, "I love you. I love you." This is a very sentimental letter, but you made me mad. "Desperate" doesn't have to be so crushed. The man might love her. He probably does. Publish this or not, just as you choose—but it's true. READER.

* * * *

DEAR READER: As a columnist of some natural reticence, I find myself in the awkward position of being unable to defend myself from your dismal accusation that I've never known the bitter-sweet pangs of love. Anyway, you've written a lovely effusion, that doesn't half do justice to the glorious subject. I only hope, however, that it doesn't lure "Desperate" back into the quicksands of what I still maintain is an altogether unrequited and largely imaginary romantic fixation. I hope, for her sake, that she puts her confidence in me, and accepts my analysis and prescription. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, June 15.

SUNDAY NEXT is Father's Day, and there seems to be very little we can do about it—if anything.

ALICE HUGHES

The florists helped Mother's Day along, and no doubt the haberdashers were not averse to a day for the old gentleman. And, well, there it is. What can we do for the revered pater but buy him a new necktie—which he will surreptitiously give to the elevator man. Practically nothing. Of course, every press agent and high-powered promoter in the Nation is knocking his or her brains out trying to think up something cute to do for dear old Pop. I've studied dozens of these stunts in the past few weeks, and the one I like best, up to now, is a contest thought up by some unnamed genius and run madly by a local men's clothing store. It is nothing less than a photographic derby in which pictures of father are to be entered showing him as he looks when he opens and gloats over his annual present.

You must admit this is pretty much of a cutie. At least it is more imaginative than offering to monogram his pajamas free, or giving him a yellow polo shirt in which he wouldn't be caught dead at a rassling match. But as you look at this thought of "Father's Expression on Father's Day," and study it, you slowly realize its dangers and handicaps. "You may picture him happy over his gifts, or sad at not receiving any," says the release which offers $100 for the best snapshot. Very nice, but aren't we more apt to catch him utterly disgusted over a purple cravat, or a smelly tobacco pouch? This idea, I fear, will lead only to fakery—such as offering him half the prize if he tries to look gay over something he detests! Perhaps we'd better forget the whole thing—buy him a dozen nice big hankies, and wish him well

The lovely bride is now a member of one of America's most famous clans, who received a royal grant to Gardiner's Island, off Long Island, some 300 years ago. The lovely girl thus shows that the modern camera model is not only able to pluck matrimonially one of the handsomest and most eligible young men about Manhattan but can move right into history's pages with the same gesture!

The famed and beloved Cohan, who will be 60 on July 4, will then take a nice vacation, and troupe the country in the show next fall . . . Pet line of the week from the local society writer who is title-struck and the arch-priestess of journalistic snobbism — "Princess Murat a fascinating visitor." I don't even bother to ask who in so-and so Princess Murat is. All I want to know, is fascinating to whom? . . . Tomorrow my Martin, the infant hurricane, leaves for a camp in Connecticut, and for the next two months the noise in the neighborhood will have to be blamed on sun spots.

Dropping into my favorite neighborhood druggery (also 17-cent books and toy airplanes) I picked up a fascinating bit of literature on the drug counter. "You can't help loving these garlic tablets!" it said, and I gave back two or three steps. "Garlic Glorified," it continued, and I fainted dead away. But the fact remains that here are some pills which "combat mineral-vitamin deficiency," and should be taken when "irate, restless, dizzy, tired." I say no more. If these tablets can do that, send me 64 gross. Naturally, I'm only kidding.

Plaids Being Used For Youthful Effect

Pink and white plaid taffeta lines the long slim gray coat and makes the blouse of a charming three piece ensemble. Give Up Dessert As First Move In Dieting Plan

Then Pare Down Trimmings Such as Jams and Gravy.

By Ida Jean Kain.

YOU KNOW YOU hate to be fat. . . . you'd give anything to be slim! Well, what's stopping you? Probably inertia. It is so easy not to do anything about your weight except wish.

Knowing that you really can lose from one to three pounds a week may help you to get started. You can lose, right along, at that rate without harming your health. All that excess weight puts a far greater strain on your health than a sensible reducing program could. The facts are that excess weight is a burden and a health handicap. Reducing only 10 pounds will sometimes lower a high blood pressure by as much as 14 points. Bringing the weight morely nearly normal lessens the work of the heart, relieves shortness of breath and gives you considerably more energy.

Now, if you seriously want to get down to normal weight, you will. The first thing you have to do is give up those foods that cause excess weight. Start with the desserts. Their omission from the diet deprives you of nothing you cannot get along better without. If all you did was give up desserts you would be taking from 300 to 500 calories less each day, and you would lose around three-fourths of a pound each week.

Besides giving up desserts, all you have to do to take off weight is pare down the trimmings—the jelly, jam, gravy, cream sauce, mayonnaise and the second and third lumps of sugar. Leaving the desserts and the trimmings out of the menu makes your reducing simple and easy and effective. On such a plan you can lose one pound a week, slowly but surely.

To speed up your weight loss, cut down on the calories still further by limiting the butter in the menu to one and one-half pats per day, bread to four slices, and by cutting all fat from the meat.

It is hard to believe, but those simple measures will enable you to lose any number of pounds. What you are doing is learning to eat intelligently, and in the long run that is twice as effective as a strict diet.

To feel well on a diet or off it, you must have some exercise, for without exercise your energy decreases. Make it an unbroken rule to walk for 30 minutes every day, and to do gymnastics of some kind for 10 to 15 minutes. If you are more than 10 pounds overweight, consult your doctor before starting to reduce.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Putting Up a Front.

My children need shoes and new dresses and panties,
Their tonsils are bad, and their teeth should have braces,
And they'd all love a trip to the movies.
But the Browns, Smiths and Greens have all had new babies,
I must send silver cups, spoons, and blankets so cunning
To show I'm a friend well worth having.

The dime store is crowded with things I could use
In my kitchen and nursery, but I turn firmly away,
For I must buy gifts for the parties
That mothers are giving for children aged 6,
And all other ages from 1 to 20,
And my youngsters must make a good showing.

My china is cracked, my utensils are battered,
My linen is threadbare, my cushions are jaded,
I'm desperately in need of new undies.
But I must buy billfolds, books, cuff links and ties.
Compacts, bracelets, and hankies, silk stockings and pearls,
For all my young friends who're "commencing."

The rent is behind and the insurance is looming,
The carpet is worn and the curtains are ragged,
We're still paying on our last baby.
But the Sapp girl is marrying some big man in oil,
So we're sending her something in silver—quite good,
To fit in with the style of her wedding.

We haven't been anywhere weeks upon end,
For gasoline is costly and shows take their toll,
And so many surprises keep pressing,
Like the Gink's celebration of ten years undivorced
And the Bloke's silver wedding and shower on the side
For their daughter-in-law who's "expecting."

Our budget would balance and relieve some of the strain,
If life could be static and people stayed put,
And were not always coming and going.
But Mrs. Gadd moves or takes a trip on a boat,
Must be speeded and welcomed with parties and gifts,
One must do the thing that's quite handsome.

This week we are dining on potatoes and beans,
Making bread into puddings, stuffing meat into peppers.
Because we've been lunching in grandeur,
For our friend Mrs. Swank has been here from back home
With her daughter and sister and a friend who is driving,
And they had to see all the "best places."

I sometimes wonder where all this will end
And if we will ever have anything all of our own
And if we're treating our creditors rightly?
But then what can one do who would not be thought tight,
Or a failure in life? To keep step with the times
One must make the magnificent gesture.

Kay Francis Sets New Hair Style

Kay Francis has done it again—started a new hair style. You'll remember she was responsible for the boyish haircuts, popular eight or nine years ago, was the first to wear a long off-the-ear bob. Now she has set the Warner Brothers studio agog with a short bob which will be a heavenly convenience for summer.

Joan Blondell, who has always felt a short haircut was more becoming to her, is having Mr. Westmore sketch out some interesting styles for her before she gives up her shoulder-length bob.

Mr. Westmore predicts a greater variety of hair dresses this coming season than we have ever seen before. Women are getting away from standardized coiffures and will wear the style most becoming, not the most modish, although the general trend is definitely toward the shorter bob.

Miss Anna May Ing's Wedding to Mr. Chang At Chinese Embassy Links East and West

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Could Rudyard Kipling have attended the wedding yesterday afternoon at Twin Oaks, the Chinese Embassy, chances are his "Never the twain shall meet" would cease to refer to East and West. The Orient and Occident met, mingled and became as one when, at a Chinese civil service followed by an American religious ceremony, Miss Anna May Ing became the bride of Tennyson Po-hsun Chang.

She is the daughter of the Counselor of the Embassy, Zuang Teh Ing, and Mrs. Ing. The bridegroom, a student at the Georgetown School of Foreign Service, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wei C. Chang, of Canton, China.

The sweeping, grass-covered lawn at Twin Oaks was the setting for the wedding, which was scheduled for 5:30 o'clock. Before a red and white rose-covered arbor, flanked by palms, the couple stood while the Chinese Ambassador, turned out in a crisp white uniform resplendent with gold braid, officiated at the Chinese ceremony. When he had finished, the Rev. E. H Pruden, pastor of the First Baptist Church, took charge of the religious service. Dr. Pruden formerly was the bride's instructor at Shankhai University.

Bridal Attire Features Cotton

War clouds hovering over the homeland of the bride and bridegroom apparently were forgotten as sunlight slanted across the colorful wedding scene, and both Oriental and Occidental eyes focused on a dainty, white-clad girl and a young man who stood at her side neatly attired in white trousers and a blue coat.

Yet bombs bursting across the Pacific had their effect on the quiet scene, and a conflict between two countries was reflected in the attire of both the bride and her attendants. All wore dresses of cotton rather than of silk because most of the latter for sale in this country is imported from Japan. Mrs. Ing, the bride's mother, however, appeared in a robe of beige silk, purchased and made in China

Long before the first strains from Lohengrin floated across the lawn, the bridegroom and three of his ushers walked to the front of the group of spectators and stood in a row to one side, awaiting the bride and other members of the wedding party. On the table before them were two large scrolls, both of which later were unrolled and read by the Ambassador during the civil ceremony.

Mrs. Leonard Hsu Is 'Go-Between'

Shortly after Mme. Ing walked down the aisle on the arm of Mrs. Leonard Hsu, the "go-between" for the bride's family, the wedding guests stood to await the advent of other members of the wedding party. Mrs. Hsu, wife of Dr. Hsu, was gowned in pea green marquisette with blending accessories.

A few minutes later, Dr. Chih Meng, director of the China Institute in New York, joined Mrs. Ing and Mrs. Hsu on the front row. He acted as "representative of the elders of the Chang family." With Dr. Meng was Dr. P. C. Chang, professor at Nankai University and a former teacher of the bridegroom, for whom he was a "go-between." Both Dr. Meng and Dr. Chang wore formal evening dress.

E. F. Chen was best man. Ushers were Robert Ing, Dr. Norman Chien, T. L. Tsui, A. Fu and Maj. Pu Hsiao.

At the conclusion of the wedding solo, "Oh Promise Me," the wedding march began, and two of the bridesmaids, Miss Lota Lois Ing, sister of the bride, and Miss Constance Chang, sister of the bridegroom, appeared on the steps leading from the house. Walking very slowly, they came down the long aisle.

Their frocks of pink marquisette, embroidered in white, blended features of Occidental and Oriental fashion. The necklines with high fitted collars and brief sleeves were strictly Chinese. The skirts, flounced out with godets of pink marquisette, were typically American. Following the bridesmaids was the matron of honor, Mrs. Y. S. Leong, whose blue marquisette frock was made on the same style as that of the bridesmaids. All three costumes were designed by the bride and Miss Lota Lois Ing.

Small Ming-yen Hsu, dressed in a long pink marquisette frock with a poke bonnet to match, carried a basket of pink and blue larkspur and roses. On the arm of her father came the bride.

Bride's Ensemble Typically American

Her entire ensemble was a concession to Occidental fashion. White instead of the traditional red favored by Chinese brides, it was of marquisette, but on simple lines, trimmed in bands of embroidery and styled with a long train. Her embroidered tulle veil was held in place by rows of orange blossoms, and her bouquet of roses and liles of the valley was centered with a white orchid.

In keeping with Oriental custom, the civil ceremony was both brief and dramatic. An announcer, who did his duty between making motion pictures of the bridal scene, called out each step of the ceremony—from the reading of the service by the Ambassador, to the low bows made by the bride and bridegroom to each other . . . to the spectators . . . to the "go-betweens" . . . and to the Ambassador.

Soft harp music was played by Anna Lois Greene during the entire service, and on through the ceremony at which Dr. Pruden officiated. When he took charge, the ritual conducted thus far in Chinese, assumed an American aspect. The familiar phrase "I pronounce you man and wife" was followed by a brief benediction. Turning to the crowd, the couple, wreathed in smiles, walked back down the aisle—not slowly this time—while members of the wedding party followed.

Bride Cuts Cake And Poses for Pictures

Later, after posing for innumerable photographs, the bride cut her towering wedding cake, and then consented to pose again. Meanwhile, guests clustered around the tables in the garden where sandwiches, tea, cakes, punch and scotch and soda were dispensed.

The wedding climaxed a romance begun more than a year ago, and many of yesterday's guests knew both the former Miss Ing and Mr. Chang when it first started. Following the reception, the couple left on their wedding trip. They will spend most of their honeymoon in California, returning to Washington in September.

Mrs. Chang attended the Ginling School in Nanking and Shanghai University. The past year she has been a student at George Washington University, where she will receive her degree next year. The bridegroom attended Nankai University and the University of Southern California, where he was graduated. He received his master of arts degree from Columbia University, and recently has been a student at the School of Foreign Service, Georgetown University, where he will continue his study next year.

Cuban Officer Honored Guest

Capt. Armando Romeu Marrero, leader of the Cuban Navy Band, which lately seems to be running away with the Washington spotlight, was feted at luncheon yesterday by the Director General of the Pan American Union, Dr. L. S. Rowe. The event took place at the Pan American Annex.

Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, the Ambassador of Cuba, was the ranking guest. Others from the Cuban Embassy staff included the Minister Counselor, Dr. Jose T. Baron; the Counselor, Dr. Vicente Valdes Rodriguez; and the Military Attache, Maj. Felipe Munilla. The Cuban Consul in Washington, Rafael Nieto, was also present.

Still others who attended the luncheon were Capt. Thomas F. Darcy, leader of the United States Army Band; Lieut. Charles Benter, leader of the United States Navy Band, and Capt. About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

TODAY we continue our list of "the tops" among Washington women.

Mrs. Homer Cummings, who concluded yestrday's category, figures again today. It is almost impossible to name any new book which this best read of all the Cabinet wives has not perused. She says her biggest "build-up" was given her by Frederic Marsh when the movie star danced with her at the last President birthday ball.

FRIENDS of Mrs. Merriam Curtis call her the most generous woman in Washington. She has come to the rescue of many a pal in difficulty with money, or a job, or both. Her very presence peps up even the stodgiest party, but she much prefers giving her own. She is the hostess par excellence, although the days are no more when she entertained on the scale she maintained in pre-New Deal Administrations. Her former home, now a club, is still run as though it were her home.

MRS. McCOOK KNOX is as pretty as the pictures on which she is an authority. She has done extensive research in early American paintings and brought the first exhibit of the Museum of Modern Art to Washington. Yet if you did not read about her activities, or pump her on the subject, it might never occur to you that she knew Picasso's first period from his second, so reluctant is she to talk of her own interests.

REPRESENTATIVE Edith Nourse Rogers, the most decorative of the women in Congress, also is one of the most hard-working. She has never missed a rool call in the House, yet finds time to adorn many a Capital party. She entertains at beautifully-appointed dinners in her large, old-fashioned apartment on Sixteenth street. A fresh flower, usually an orchid, is always pinned to her frock.

MRS. DWIGHT F. DAVIS is one of those rare persons who tell anecdotes so well that you are fascinated even when standing up at a crowded cocktail party. She has blue eyes, a piquant face, the figure of a girl and a man's mind. A marvelous executive, she steered the women's organization for the repeal of prohibition until victory was achieved. Art, her husband, and a new house absorb most of her attention.

Mrs. I. B. Emery Heads D.A.R. Defense Teaching

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Mrs. Henry M. Robert, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, yesterday announced Mrs. Imogen B. Emery, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, as national chairman of national defense through patriotic education. She made the announcement at a rally held by the national defense chairman of Maryland, Mrs. Irvine L. Miller, of Berwyn, in the Louisiana room of Memorial Continental Hall.

Mrs. Robert left her duties long enough to stop in at the meeting and announce the new national chairman. In a short discussion of work and aims of the organization, she told D. A. R. members she was never interested in politics as such, but declared that every loyal Daughter should be interested in Government.

The meeting yesterday was the first of two Mrs. Miller's committee is sponsoring. The second will be conducted tomorrow in Baltimore.

Mrs. Benjamin F. Wade, national defense chairman for the Brigadier Rezin Beall Chapter, of Laurel, opened the discussion of what part the D. A. R. should take in patriotic work.

Mrs. Paul Scharf, executive secretary of the national defense committee at D. A. R. headquarters, pointed out that the scope of the organization's activities is restricted to certain lines by the statement of its objects, as set forth in its constitution. Many members come into the society primarily because of their interest in lineage, she pointed out, and are not concerned with the rest of its work.

Objects of the society as they are outlined, are: "To perpetuate the memory and spirit of the men and women who achieved American independence by the acquisition and protection of historical spots, and the erection of monuments; by the encouragement of historical research in relation to the Revolution and the publication of its results; by the preservation of documents and relics, and of the records of the individual services of Revolutionary soldiers and patriots, and by the promotion of celebrations of all patriotic anniversaries.

"To carry out the injunction of Washington in his farewell address to the American people, 'to promote, as an object of primary importance, institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge,' thus developing an enlightened public opinion, and affording to young and old such advantages as shall develop in them the largest capacity for performing the duties of American citizens.

"To cherish, maintain, and extend the institutions of American freedom, to foster true patriotism and love of country, and to aid in securing for mankind all the blessings of liberty."

She concluded her talk with an analysis of the resolutions passed by the recent Continental Congress, which had been prepared by the national defense committee.

Sra. De Conde Visiting Here

Seeks Aid to Move 5,000 Barcelona Children to Southern France.

An interesting visitor at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women is Senora Eloina R. Malasetechezarria de Conde, who arrived from Spain the first of this week.

Senora de Conde is in America as representative of the Federation of Educational Workers and the Committee of Children's Welfare of Barcelona. Her purpose is to ensit aid here for moving some 5,000 children from Catalonia to a large estate in southern France which has been donated by a French philanthropist.

"No place is safe from bombardment from the air," said Senora de Conde. She explained how the children had been brought to Catalonia from Madrid and other cities and villages when bombings made it impossible for them to remain in their homes.

"When we first took them there, they were apprehensive and fearful," said Senora de Conde, who had charge of moving the first group of children. "In a short time, as they regained a feeling of security, they relaxed and again become happy and able to study. Now, since air raids have reached them again, they are as they were before. It is impossible for them to apply themselves to anything and we fear, if they are not taken to another environment, they will carry the scars of war throughout their lifetimes.

The estate is near enough to Catalonia so that the change will not be too great for them. They will be in charge of their own teachers.

MANY interesting programs have been given during the club season by Mrs. Brooks Fletcher, wife of Representative Fletcher, and Mrs. Roy O. "Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

THE ADJOURNMENT of Congress will take from Washington for the summer two soloists who have provided programs for a number of club meetings this season—Mrs. Brooks Fletcher, wife of Representative Fletcher, of Ohio, and Mrs. Roy O. Woodruff, wife of Representative Woodruff, of Michigan. Both have had as their accompanist on numerous occasions Mrs. Lois Marshall Hicks, State chairman of music for the District of Columbia Daughters of the American Revolution and an active member of the Political Study Club.

Mrs. Hicks has played for both singers in programs at the Congressional Club and accompanied Mrs. Woodruff when she sang last month for the Political Study Club. She is a graduate of the Albion College Conservatory and of the Sherwood Music School in Chicago.

Mrs. Fletcher was in Gilbert and Sullivan Opera, and sang the role of "Yum-Yum" in a tour of 178 New England cities. She has also done radio work, and traveled from coast to coast with Representative Fletcher in Chautauqua programs. She is an accomplished accordionist as well as a singer, but has been keeping her accordion in the background during the past season to the disappointment of her friends.

Mrs. Woodruff has sung in churches in Michigan and New York State and each summer is guest soloist at the church in Huron City, Mich., where Dr. William Lyon Phelps conducts services. She has also done concert and radio work.

DR. AND MRS. GEORGE C. HAVENNER, assisted by their son, Albert Barnum Havenner, and Miss "Bee" Robinson entertained the members of the American Federation of Government Employes Lodge No. 149 at a weiner roast in their "four-story" back yard at 2912 Albemarle street on Tuesday evening.

Dr. Havenner, long active in the civic affairs of Washington and who served as president of the Federation of Citizens Associations for four consecutive years, has taken up the hobby of rock gardening. He built his first rock garden at their home on the corner of Minnesota avenue and eighteenth street southeast. His new one at 2912 Albemarle street is rapidly becoming one of the show places of the Forest Hills section. The Havenner rockery is only a year old, but it compares with many of the older gardens in the city. It is informal, with an outside fireplace and the whole garden lighted at night by floodlights.

Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess.

The Little Potter.

Who doth create doth something add
And thus enrich and makes us glad.
—Old Mother Nature.

The dear Old Briar-patch is a tangle of bushes and brambles and briars that clutch and scratch and tear those who are unwelcome there. The Old Briar-patch protects its own, or at least tries to, and that is why Peter Rabbit and his family love it so dearly. You see they long ago learned how to cut little paths in all directions, little paths that in places are like little tunnels, all the thorns and brambles cut out. They love the Briar-patch and the Briar-patch loves them. So when Peter's babies were big enough to leave the nest out in the grass on the Green Meadows their mother led them straight to the dear Old Briar-patch.

It was there that Tommy, Sue and Sammy went to look for them. They hoped to find some of the wee rabbits near the edge where at least a glimpse of them might be obtained. But hardly had they reached the Briar-patch when Sue, whose eyes are sharp and miss little, discovered something which for the time being put all thought of baby rabbits out of her head.

"Tommy, the fairies have been here!" she cried.

"Huh!" sniffed Sammy. "Sue's always finding places where the fairies have been, but she never finds the fairies. What do you suppose she has found now?"

The two boys joined Sue. "Look!" she cried as they came up. "If a fairy didn't make these tell me who did!" She was pointing to a branch of a bush growing on the edge of the Briar-patch. Without waiting for a reply she continued: "They are fairy water bottles. I know they are. No one but a fairy could have made them. Now, Tommy Brown, don't you dare tell me that there are no fairies."

Tommy grinned appreciatively. "I guess you are right, Sue," said he. "Fairies have wings, and if having wings makes a fairy a fairy it was who made those bottles or jugs or whatever you call them. But they are not water bottles, Sue. Probably one of them is full. In fact, I know it is because it has been sealed up. But it isn't full of water."

"What is it full of?" Sammy wanted to know.

"Caterpillars," replied Tommy, and grinned.

"Not really!" cried Sue.

"Yes, really," retorted Tommy. "And here comes the fairy now, and she's bringing a caterpillar," he added.

"That? That's no fairy! That's a —what is it, Tommy?"

That is why Peter Rabbit and his family love it so dearly

"A wasp, Sammy. Just a wasp bringing home the bacon, so to speak," replied Tommy.

"What do you mean by bringing home the bacon?" Sammy wanted to know, eyeing his cousin as if he suspected him of a joke of some kind.

"Just that that wasp is bringing home the meat for the family, and in a minute will put it in storage in one of those bottles that Sue thinks a fairy must have made," replied Tommy.

Sure enough, even as Tommy spoke the wasp entered one of those little "bottles" and dragged in the caterpillar. "What does he do that for?" demanded Sammy.

"He doesn't do it; she does it," replied Tommy. "Those fairy bottles of Sue's are the nurseries for her children, and she made them. She is what is called a potter wasp or jug-building wasp. Some people call those jugs instead of bottles. Anyway she makes 'em out of clay mud and fills 'em with caterpillars and lays her eggs in 'em and the eggs hatch and the young have a supply of fresh meat—"

"Fresh meat!" interrupted Sammy. "How long do you expect those caterpillars to keep fresh this warm weather?"

"Until they are needed," replied Tommy. "That caterpillar you saw her take in there isn't dead—just paralyzed. She is too smart to kill a caterpillar. There she comes out again. You've seen mud wasps. She is a mud wasp only she isn't satisfied with an ordinary plain house of simple mud cells but makes these little bottles or jugs and fastens them on twigs."

"It is wonderful," said Sue softly. "It is just as wonderful as if she were a real fairy."

Miss Emma T. Hahm presided at the informal program, which included introduction of guests and one or two short talks by club members.

Miss Mabel Strider, past president of the club, talked briefly on the need in Zonta for an organization for young business women leading up to Zonta membership. She suggested that members think about advisability of sponsoring some such group.

Barney House Club Is Closed

Members of the Women's Club of the Barney Neighborhood House last night held their final supper meeting of the season in the beautiful garden in the rear of the settlement, 470 N street southwest. Three charter members of the club, which was organized in 1906, were present. They were Mrs. James Martin, president; Miss Lena Barghausen, secretary, and Mrs. John Dietz.

Mrs. Martin and Mrs. Dietz are club, but have married daughters club but have mirried daughters who also belong. Mrs. Martin's daughter is Mrs. William Friedrich and Mrs. Dietz's daughter, Mrs. William T. Duke.

Thirty-two years ago, when the Barney House was just beginning to be recognized as a great social center for the southwest section, Mrs. Dietz, Mrs. Martin and Miss Barghausen were among a group of women who saw the need for volunteer service to their neighbors and formed a women's club with this idea in mind. It was this club that originated the idea of preparing supper at the annual May festivals in order that guests could remain through both afternoon and evening performances.

Since that time the work has grown and the club membership supplies the cakes and candies which are sold annually, as well as continuing the custom of preparing supper daily for visitors.

In addition to this work, the members, most of whom are well acquainted in the neighborhood, form a corps of volunteers which aids in carrying out the extra activities assumed by the settlement among southwest families. They are also of service in the making of costumes for special events and as assistants in teaching some of the classes at the settlement house.

Cruise Passenger In Brawl Pays $25

Excursionists who furnished numerous free thrills during the S. S. Potomac's moonlight cruise early Sunday morning continued to pack Police Court yesterday. The only case was that of Arthur Cook, 26, 153 U street northwest, who was fined $25 for disorderly conduct as a result of Sunday's free-for-all. According to Traffic Manager H. F. Burroughs of the Potomac River Line, Cook attempted for an hour and a half to prevent the boat's special officers from arresting the man they believed started the brawl.

Assault charges against Ethelbert Miller, 22, 902 Tenth street northeast, will be heard Friday. Miller forfeited $15 collateral on drunk and disorderly charges.

YOU'RE A HERO · · TO YOUR SON

Most boys worship their Dad as a hero whose standards and ideals they gradually acquire as their own.

Nothing is quite so disillusioning to the clear eyes of a youngster as the sight of a man—his own father—who has used liquor unwisely.

The damage goes deeper than momentary shame.

Any man who cannot drink wisely and moderately, owes it to his son... his family, not to drink at all.

The coming generation will be less apt to use liquor intemperately if older people will regard it as a luxury and treat it as a contribution to gracious living—to be enjoyed in moderation.

Surely, Father's Day is an appropriate occasion for the House of Seagram, as one of America's leading distillers, to say as we said four years ago, and have constantly reiterated..."Drink Moderately".

Vander Meer Hurls Second No-Hitter; Nats Trade Almada for West

Sports — The Washington Post — Sports

*X WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, JUNE 16, 1938 19

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Cleveland, Ohio, June 15. Without the trace of a blush, Manager Oscar Vitt, of Cleveland, today submitted the names of no less than five of his Indians among his choices for the American League's All-Star game team.

Witt showed an admiration for his Indians that is not shared by the remainder of the league, at least as All-Star timber. From his Cleveland club he has selected Pitchers Johnny Allen and Bob Feller, First Baseman Hal Trosky, Outfielder Earl Averill and Third Baseman Ken Keltner.

POVICH.

Vitt's complete list of 23 players follows:

Catchers—Dickey (Yankees), Hayes (Athletics), York (Tigers).

First Basemen—Trosky (Indians), Foxx (Red Sox), Greenberg (Tigers).

Second Baseman—Gehringer (Tigers).

Third Basemen—Rolfe (Yankees), and Keltner (Indians).

Shortstops—Travis (Nats) and Cronin (Red Sox).

* * * *

With such as Averill and Allen, there can be no quarrel. Averill is currently leading all the American League hitters with his .375 average and he has always ranked as one of the better outfielders in the league. Today, for instance, he saved the ball game for the Indians with a catch of a ball hit by Al Simmons that is best described as the finest catch ever perpetrated in the Cleveland park.

And Vitt need not apologize, either, for his selection of another of his Cleveland players—Johnny Allen. He has the proper appreciation of Allen's talents, because despite the wide publicity commanded by other American League pitchers, notably Grove, Gomez, Ruffing and Feller, Allen has the absolute best record of any pitcher in either big league over the past five years.

* * * *

This year, Allen again rates among the pitching leaders with his seven victories against one defeat. And he is no flash in the pan, for his record for the past five years shows a total of 68 victories against only 28 defeats and an average that is unmatched.

But, oh, Oscar, how could you so blandly pick those other Indians for the All-Star team? We mean Trosky, Keltner and Feller. Let's take 'em apart, one by one.

* * * *

There's Trosky. A fine hitter and second in the batting averages to be sure, but he's Mr. Tanglefoot himself around that bag. He has been in the league for a half-dozen seasons now and this is the first time he has ever been mentioned as All-Star timber. Trosky's improvement has not been that startling.

* * * *

And Feller, he's a nice boy, kind to his folks and possessor of the best high hard one in the American League. But he has never before been accused of being an All-Star pitcher. Managers lean to proven performers in that game and that should let Feller out. There is also the item of Feller's proverbial wildness. The American League All-Star manager won't look with favor on that. And, of course, there will be no Rollie Hemsley to catch Feller in the All-Star game.

* * * *

In naming young Ken Keltner as an All-Star third baseman, Vitt undoubtedly has attempted to show his confidence in the rookie from Milwaukee. But there is grave doubt that other managers have the same confidence in him. At third base, too, there is a premium on coolness and experience as well as skill, and there are third basemen unnamed by Vitt who could spot Keltner 30 points in the batting averages and still lay logical claims to being better third basemen.

There is, of course, no rule against putting first-year men on the All-Star team. DiMaggio made it in 1936. But in that game at Braves Field, DiMaggio was the goat, if you remember, with his atrocious fielding. Keltner could, conceivably, star in the All-Star game, but percentage-playing managers prefer to stick to proven reliables.

Happily, perhaps, for the American League, Vitt's selections can be offset by the choices of the seven other managers whose opinions help to form the consensus. An All-Star team with Feller pitching, Keltner playing third and Trosky first, would be no inspiring sight to anybody but the National League.

Vander Meer Hurls Second No-Hit Game

Cincy Southpaw Breaks All Major League Records in 6-0 Win.

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, June 15.—Johnny Vander Meer, 23-year-old Cincinnati Reds southpaw, broke all major league pitching records tonight by hurling his second straight no-hit, no-run game, blanking the Dodgers, 6 to 0.

The fast-balling youngster, in his first full year in the major leagues, pitched a no-hitter against the Boston Bees only last Saturday.

Eight Dodgers reached base, all by walks, but the 190-pounder from Midland Park, N. J., pitched his way out of the pinches on each occasion. In the ninth inning, he loaded the bases with one out on passes, but forced one runner at the plate and then got Leo Durocher on a fly ball to end the threat.

Feat Mackes History.

Never before in the history of the major leagues, ancient or modern, has any pitcher hurled two no-hitters in a single season, let alone on two consecutive games. In fact, only eight have pitched two no-hitters over their entire career.

The victory was Vander Meer's seventh of the season against two defeats.

In hurling his second no-hitter, Vander Meer also broke Dazzy Vance's National League record for consecutive hitless innings. His nine tonight, coupled with his nine against the New York Giants in his previous start, June 5, gave him a record of 18 1-3 innings, one full inning better than the listed mark of 17 1-3 set by Dazzy Vance in 1925.

The major league record in this respect is held by Cy Young, for a 23-inning stretch in 1904 but Young's mark was accomplished by pitching assignments of two, six, nine and six innings.

The Reds backed Vandermeer up with an 11-hit attack off three Brooklyn pitchers, featuring Buck McCormick's second homer of the season, with two mates aboard in a big four-run third inning, and they played errorless ball a-field behind him.

For eight innings, not a Dodger reached third base. In the ninth, he ran into the only difficulty in accomplishing his unprecedented feat. In that frame, after Buddy Hassett had grounded out, Babe Phelps, Cookie Lavagetto and Dolph Camilli walked in succession, loading the bags. At that point, Vandermeer took a new grip on his control, took Ernie Koy's weak grounder to force a runner at the plate, and then got Durocher to fly out on a two-and-two pitch.

38,748 See Game.

Vandermeer earned his second "hall-of-fame" berth before one of the largest crowds to see a game at Ebbets Field in years. It was the first night game in the Brooklyn's home park, and 38,748 turned out for the occasion. About 10,000 others were turned away from the ticket windows when the fire department ordered the gates closed a few minutes before game time.

Johnny, who landed with the Reds after a tryout five years ago with the same Dodgers he defeated tonight, fanned seven batters during the game and was never once in serious trouble until his control left him momentarily in the final frame.

Vander Meer has been in the baseball headlines for two years, after Nashville, of the Southern Association, optioned him to Durham (N. C.), of the Piedmont League, early in 1936. Although getting a late start with Durham, he won 19 games that year and was the league's strike-out king with 295 "kayo" victims. His earned-run average was 2.65 per nine innings, and, for his record, he was named the outstanding minor leaguer of the season.

Born in Paterson, N. J., he got

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Johnny Vander Meer (left) who made major league history last night by pitching his second no-hit game in five days, received best wishes from Babe Ruth in the Cincinnati dugout before the game in Brooklyn, on his first performance against the Boston Bees. Babe evidently brought the Reds' ace luck as he blanked the Dodgers, 6 to 0, with no hits. It ran his streak to 18 1-3 consecutive hitless and scoreless innings.

R. Mangrum, Guldahl Tie

Snead, Runyan Stroke Back in Western.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, June 15.—It was a case of 36 holes behind him, 36 holes ahead of him and Ray Mangrum beside him as Ralph Guldahl reached the half-way mark in his quest for a third consecutive Western Open golf championship today with the gangling Dayton, Ohio, pro sharing the lead.

Mangrum, stroking a smooth course over the treacherous Westwood terrain, brought in his second straight 72 for a 44 total as Guldahl, alone in the lead with a par 71 yesterday, came in with a 73 for his second round.

As par was the only winner throughout the day, other sharpshooters who were on Guldhal's heels yesterday still were stalking him and still others slowly faded into the background.

Little Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., added a 36-37—73 today to his 72 to be deadlocked with Sam Snead, of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., at 145, one stroke behind the leaders. Snead also added a 73 today to reach his total.

Jimmy Hines, the New York redhead, and Bob Hamilton, a dark horse from Evansville, Ind., were a stroke behind Snead and Runyan. Hines was out in even par 35 today, but went two over on the in nine for a 73. Hamilton, in the 74 bracket at the end of yesterday's play, was one ... the very few to even approach par today. He carded 34, 38—72.

George Abrams Offered $2,500 To Meet Corbett on the Coast

Bout With Honeyboy Jones in Pittsburgh Also Offered; No Decision Until After Furr Fight.

Two offers came yesterday to Georgie Abrams, 19-year-old Washington middleweight who is preparing for next Monday night's ten-round District championship match with Phil Furr, the roving District scrapper, at Griffith Stadium.

Suey Welch, San Francisco matchmaker, wired Syd Fishel, Abrams' manager, offering him $2,500 to meet Young Corbett III, former world's titleholder, in a match next month.

Another wire came from Lew Raymond, Pittsburgh matchmaker, inviting Georgie to meet Honeyboy Jones, well known colored scrapper, June 30, in the Smoky City. Abrams was offered $500 and expenses—more than he has been getting for his local matches.

Fishel is interested in the offer to face Corbett, but stated yesterday he would not accept either match until after Abrams' match with Furr Monday night.

As for the Pittsburgh offer, Fishel may take that by way of keeping Georgie on the go for some bigger shots this summer—provided, of course, Furr doesn't beat him.

Fishel is planning to take Abrams on a tour of the Pacific Coast, if Georgie can win from Furr. Everything seems to hinge on the Furr match, inasmuch as the winner will be acclaimed the District champion. Abrams will be shooting for his twenty-first victory in 22 starts.

That $2,500 is a lot of money for Georgie and Syd, and, since a victory over Corbett would just about "make" Abrams, it is doubtful if Fishel will pass up such an opportunity. Abrams really went "big league" when he trimmed Teddy Yarosz.

Corbett, No. 1 challenger, upset the dope not so long ago when he beat Freddy Appostoli, who previously had won from Champion Freddie Steele in a nontitle match.

Soon to get a ninth ranking on the middleweight ladder by National Boxing Association, Abrams realizes that a victory over Furr would be the necessary stimulant to send him away on a Pacific Coast campaign.

Furr is due in town tomorrow from New York, and will work out at a private gym.

2 Deadlock In Cup Play At Columbia

Mrs. Merrill Lord, Miss Lila Sari Tie With Net 76.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Miss Lila Sari, making her second tournament appearance of the season, and Mrs. Merrill Lord, of the host Columbia Club, paced the first day's play in the annual Star Cup event at Columbia yesterday with net 76s, the lowest total of the year in the Women's Golf Association tourneys.

Miss Sari, out in 50 and back in 46, for a 96, and Mrs. Lord, who put together a pair of consistent 44s for an 88, subtracted handicaps of 20 and 12, respectively, for the tying score. Mrs. J. O. Rhyne, Congressional, 41-44,85-8—77, and Mrs. J. W. Ludewig, Army and Navy, 42-46, 88-11—77, shared the runner-up berth a stroke back. Mrs. Rhyne's card included two birdie deuces.

Ties for the lead were practically unanimous as Mrs. Betty Meckley, Indian Spring, and Ellen Kincaid, Beaver Dam, were deadlocked at 84 for the lowest gross score. Mrs. Meckley played the lowest nine of the day going out, a 40, and paired it with an incoming 44, while Miss Kincaid, after an outgoing 43, played the last six holes in even fours, to return in 41.

All together, 15 of the 140 contestants had net scores under the 80 mark, making a new high in low scoring for recent tournaments on the Women's District Golf Association card.

The 78's included Mrs. P. G. Crisp and Mrs. J. A. Marr of the host club, with 90-12, 78, and 87-9, 78. Miss Kincaid, 84-6, 78. Mrs. Wilda Martin, Kenwood, 93-15, 78, and Mrs. Richard Kreusberg, Indian Spring, 87-9, 78. The latter had a 41 on the first nine but required 46 coming back to lose a chance for the undisputed lead.

Manor members monopolized the net 79's, Mrs. L. G. Pray with 85-6, Mrs. Harvey Cooper, 96-17, and Mrs. H. J. Simons, 89-10, 79. The others were Mrs. Myron Davis, Congressional, 87-8, 79, aided by playing the par three holes in one under par, with three 3's and a deuce, and Mrs. George Hussey, Army and Navy, with 88-8, 80.

Mrs. Walter Stokes, Indian Spring, defending champion, was among the 80-net shooters, with 85-5, her gross score tied with second lowest of the day. Marion Brown, the new District champion, was good in 42 but ran into trouble on the seventeenth hole, taking a seven, and finished with 46 for an 88.

Mrs. Hussey, Mrs. Stokes and Mrs. Rhyne with 85's and Mrs. Charlotte Stern, Indian Spring, and Mrs. Leo Walper, unattached with 86's were other low gross scores.

Mrs. Lord's consistent rounds were marked by an even par performance on Columbia's trick par three holes, while Miss Sari, after a spotty outgoing nine, played the last seven holes in two under fives to finish with 46 after taking seven on the tenth.

The event will be concluded with an 18-hole round today. Yesterday's results, pairings and starting times:

Roosevelt Signs District's College Boxing Measure

Ever a diplomat, President Roosevelt satisfied both parties concerned yesterday when he signed the collegiate boxing bill which has been a source of controversy for several months between Catholic and Columbus universities.

Columbus, also, is satisfied, however, for a clause written into the measure dictates that a college, if it so desires, may affiliate with the commission if it obtains approval of the District Commissioners.

Yanks Trip Chisox, 6-4, For 5 in Row

Champs Stick on Heels of Cleveland, Only ½ Game Behind.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 15.—The New York Yankees stretched their winning streak to five straight today and remained half a game back of first place in the American League by coming from behind to trounce the White Sox, 6 to 4.

A three-run rally in the eighth, after the Sox had gone ahead in the seventh on Larry Rosenthal's pinch homer, put the game on ice for the Yanks. They scored the three runs at the expense of Duncan Rigney, who took Johnny Whitehead's place at the start of the frame.

Tom Farr Leaves For U. S.; Wants Adamick First

Fined $3,750 by the British board of boxing control for his failure to go through with a contract to box Max Schmeling here, Farr faced the loss of his British Empire title for failing to pay.

Asked what would happen if the board took this action, Farr said: That would be too bad for them—and for me.

"My last two visits home cost me over £6,000 (around $30,000) and I have had continual worries.

"When a farmer finds soil that will not bear any crops he goes somewhere else. That's all I am doing."

Farr said he probably would meet Jimmy Adamick first. Abe Feldman, American heavyweight, also sailed with Farr.

Blast Chase For 4 Hits to Clinch Game

Snap Losing Streak to Give Whitehill Win Over Ex-Mates.

Cleveland, June 15.—The Nats gave a ball game back to the Indians today. They gave it back in the eighth inning, after having it securely in their possession. Specifically, it was young Ken Chase who returned the game to the keeping of the Indians in the eighth.

Chase had been doing very well up to that point. He had allowed only seven hits and he had a 4-to-3 lead. Then he weakened and pitched four hits at the Indians, who shoved across three runs and won the ball game by the obvious score of 6 to 4.

It was a painful defeat for the Nats. Painful because their conqueror was ancient Earl Whitehill, who was discharged for incompetence by the Nats several years ago. The aged southpaw lasted the entire distance.

Young Chase dug his own pitfall in the eighth, when he mishandled Lyn Lary's drive back into the box and then threw it wide of Zeke Bonura to put Lary on second with the tying run. A sacrifice sent Lary to third and then the Indians began their three-run movement.

Hale's Single Starts It.

In rapid succession Sammy Hale singled against the rightfield wall, Julius Solters rapped a three-bagger against the same barrier and Earl Averill pushed a hit through the infield. The upshot of it all was three runs for the Indians and the ball game.

Through no fault of their own, the Nats actually lost the ball game in their own half of the eighth inning after Rick Ferrell and Chase had led off with a pair of singles. Whitehill, obviously staggering, disposed of Case and Lewis on tame pop flies and then faced Al Simmons.

Mr. Simmons will never hit a ball more solidly than the first pitch Whitehill served him. Far, far into left centerfield it rocketed, headed for the base of the bleachers 415 feet away. Leftfielder Julius Solters made a last desperate lunge for the ball and missed with his upstretched glove. But from somewhere came Earl Averill to dash behind Solters and, with his back to the plate, catch the ball with his gloved hand just before he nosed into the dirt.

That feat by Averill cut off two Washington runs, perhaps three, and as matters eventuated, actually won the game.

Score Tied Five Times.

It was a daffy kind of ball game, anyway. Five times the score was tied. The Nats took a 1-0 lead at the start and the Indians tied it at 1-1. Cleveland went to the front, 2-1 and in the fourth the Nats tied it. Again the Indians took the lead at 3-2, and the Nats went ahead in the sixth, 4-3. Those were the figures when Chase weakened in the eighth.

Until that eighth, Rookie Chase had been having a large afternoon. He had contributed three hits to the Nats' attack and when Washington finally took the lead at 4 to 3, he was within reach of victory. For three consecutive innings, through the fifth, sixth and seventh, he held the Indians scoreless, allowing only one hit. There was no indication that he would lose his effectiveness.

The run that gave the Nats the lead at the start was a gift affair that followed Case's single. Kroner threw wild to second base in an attempted forced play, and Case raced to third, whence he scored on Simmons' single.

Two Doubles—Cheap.

Bruce Campbell's triple against the convenient rightfield wall tied the score at 1 to 1, and then the InIdians, took the lead, 2 to 1, on a failed to get under Averill's windblown pop and Stone sadly misjudged Kroner's fly to rightfield.

The Injuns virtually gave a run to the Nats in the fourth, when, after Travis singled, Julius Solters permitted Bluege's single to roll through his legs, Travis scoring. But a two-bagger by Kroner in the Indians' half of the inning put Cleveland in front again, 3 to 2.

Johnny Stone's double down the rightfield line launched a two-run uprising by the Nats in the sixth, and, after Ferrell walked, Chase scored Stone with a single to center. Lewis, too, drew a walk to fill the bases with two out, and then Simmons beat out a single that scored Ferrell and put the Nats ahead, 4 to 3.

Then, in the eighth, the Indians took charge.

Krakauskas Set To Pitch Today

Cleveland, June 15.—Joe Krakauskas, fast but erratic rookie southpaw, will get his first starting assignment of the season for the Nats tomorrow when he takes the mound against the Indians in the series finale.

Krakauskas' pitching opponent will be the fast-ball Bob Feller.

5,000 See Jabberie Capture Glenmore Handicap at Charles Town

Beats Jadaan By a Length In Big Event

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 15. Making the most of a featherweight assignment of 101 pounds, Jabberie, a daughter of Blind Play, left seven others in her wake and romped off with the Glenmore Handicap, outstanding event on today's program. With Apprentice Beverly Hacker doing the booting, Jabberie came to the finish line a length in front of Jadaan, with Tuleyries Lin third.

The crowd of 5,000 made Grumpy the favorite and was willing to swear off Snow White and the other six dwarfs when the numbers were posted. The favorite showed a burst of speed at the beginning and then folded badly. He appeared to be sore going to the post and ran accordingly.

Grumpy showed the way to the first turn with Jabberie lapped on him. Along the backstretch, Grumpy gave up and Jabberie took command, never to be headed thereafter. Jadaan came around horses and appeared to be the one to catch the flying filly, but Hacker went to the whip and Jadaan could not gain in the final 50 yards.

The program began with a parade of favorites. Aella, under Sammy Palumbo's handling, pulled no punches in the first race. The 8-year-old mare bounded to the front soon after the break and drew out to win by five lengths from Gee Sharp with Gagne third. The winner paid $5.

After seven straight female horses had won, an 8-year-old gelding, Revonah, took the finale at a $7 mutuel to give Apprentice Hacker his fourth winner of the program. Shebang, which was the favorite and would have made a clean sweep for the "gals," was second ahead of Flying Carpet.

Hacker took the seventh race with Washoe Valley, bringing the $3.80 choice to the wire ahead of Royal Veil and Nay Nay.

Sir Jim James Wins.

Eddie Bean Fires 5 Birdies to Tie Beaver Dam's Record 31

Down In Front

With Richards Vidmer

Copyright, 1938, by New York Tribune, Inc.

Now that I seem to be committed concerning the outcome of the heavyweight championship fight nevt week, although it is contrary to custom to pick a winner so far in advance, I might as well keep right on crawling out on that well known limb.

VIDMER.

Of course I ought to have better sense. Look what happened a couple of years ago. Yet here I am, just recovered from the terrific fall, healthy again for the first time, and yet I can't keep away. I suppose some people just never learn.

Still, there really doesn't seem to be any danger this time. It isn't likely that Joe Louis will make the same mistake twice. After all, he was just a kid with less than 30 professional fights when he met Max Schmeling the first time. He had been winning his battles without a great deal of effort and he was pretty well convinced that one fight would be just as easy as another.

The night he saw Max Baer and Jim Braddock fight for the heavyweight championship he started yawning in the third round, took a short nap between the sixth and ninth, and watched the finish with a broad grin on his face. When the final gong sounded, he turned to John Roxborough, his manager, and laughed loudly and long.

"Do you mean those are the two best fighters in the world?" he chuckled. "Haw, haw, haw!"

If winning the title meant beating fellows like that, he figured, the road leading to a title fight must be strewn with cream puffs, sofa cushions and fleecy white lambs, and Max Schmeling was just another guy to be met along the road.

That was Louis' attitude when he went into the ring that June night two years ago. He didn't have a doubt in the world about the outcome. Neither did I, for that matter. And I'm just as certain this time that Louis will win by a knockout. He's too strong, too fast, too good a puncher and too clever a boxer to lose to the German——

Besides Louis wanted to make his triumph over Schmeling look pretty. He had knocked out Paulino with a single punch, playing him like a bull fighter with lightning speed and harmless taps until the moment for the kill, then making one deft thrust, packed with dynamite, that exploded the Bounding Basque's head.

• • • •

Before Louis hit him that single punch, Paulino was as fresh as a left-handed busher with a .400 batting average. When he reached the floor blood was pouring from his nose, mouth and ears, his eyes were swollen and his knees had gone rubbery. It was a masterful exhibition of manslaughter.

So Louis wanted to make his victory over Schmeling look just as pretty. He pawed lightly with his left, tapped timidly and watched for the opening he sought through the first few rounds. But before he found his opening, something happened; something sudden and unexpected; something for which he was in no way prepared. Schmeling hit him a terrific punch with a right hand, knocked him down and left him dazed.

• • • •

Louis hadn't planned on anything like that and his lack of experience, his youth and his assurance caused him to do the wrong thing—instead of staying down, taking the count of nine and letting his head clear, he came up immediately, dazed and shaken as he was. And he got two more thundering rights to the head almost immediately.

From that moment on Joe was a man in a dream, a drunken fighter battling through a fog by sheer instinct. From that time on until he was counted out, he was shaking his head, trying to clear his vision, hoping to regain his equilibrium. But every time he almost emerged from the half-slumber through which he was stumbling, bang! another right would send him back into the sea of uncertainty.

• • • •

That isn't likely to happen again. Louis won't be so sure of himself or so intent on making it look pretty. All he will be thinking about is winning. And I expect him to wade right in from the beginning and bring about a quick ending.

(There certainly IS a familiar ring to those statements. They sound repetitious, as though I had dug them up out of the forgotten past!)

Besides, two years can make quite a difference to a fighter. Sometimes it helps, sometimes it hurts. And it seems to me that in this case, two years have been advantageous to Louis and worked against Max Schmeling. Both are two years older, but in Joe's case a little age should produce an improvement. He has been a busy fighter in those two years and he has learned many things, principal among which is that nothing should be taken for granted when somebody is trying to knock you unconscious. He took a great deal for granted the last time he fought Max.

And two years, by all the theories, should have taken something away from Schmeling's effectiveness. He is a couple of years older, too, and in his case that means two years farther away from his prime, for at thirty-three, which Schmeling will be in less than three months, a warrior is passing, not progressing.

(Somehow I seem to recall having thought at one time that thirty-one was rather an advanced age for a fighter!)

Anyway, even this far in advance, I can see quite clearly that this will be an entirely different performance than the last one, with a different beginning and a far different outcome. Unless my vision is blurred or I suddenly have developed an advance case of color blindness, Louis will come out at the first bell, start throwing punches, have Schmeling retreating before the opening round is ended, have him groggy in the second and knock him out in the third.

(There certainly is a startlingly familiar sound to all this!)

Airport Swim Pool Opens Tomorrow

Washington Airport Pool will open tomorrow with a quartet of lifeguards whose names have been making George Washington University football history.

Jay Turner, who was recently signed to play with the Washington Redskins after booting the pigskin for G. W. U., will spend his summer in the lifeguard's crows nest at the Airport Pool.

The rest of the line-up calls for Elmore Borden, G. W. U., Howard Jones, lanky Texan who has been playing a bang-up game for the local college and Irvin Lewis, stellar player at Fork Union Military Academy, who is being groomed to take his place on the G. W. U. team next season.

Hardy Pearce, Central High School coach, who is managing the local swim resort, has installed new individual steel lockers at the pool to supplant the "bag system" used formerly.

Shoots a 63 With Spencer In New Mark

Duo Clips 9 Strokes Off Par to Better Course Best Ball Play.

Eddie Bean, Beaver Dam amateur, tied a course mark yesterday and, with Cliff Spencer, set another as they went on a birdie barrage over the Landover layout.

Bean played the back nine in 31 strokes, including five birdies in six holes, one of the most remarkable sub-par streaks of the year, and totaled 69 for the round while Spencer, also with a 69, paired with Bean for a best ball of 63, nine under par and three strokes under the previous best ball mark.

Bean's back nine 31 tied a like score made by Spencer on a previous date. The amateur was two over par as he played the first nine in 38 yesterday, and after playing the tenth and eleventh holes in par figures, birdied five of the next six, with four 3s, a deuce and four. He finished with a par for the 31.

Spencer and Bean had a best ball 34 on the out nine, and had birdies on all but the eleventh and fourteenth as they came back in 29, seven under regulation figures. Spencer had eight fours and a five on the out nine, and was back in 32, finishing with three birdies on the tough finishing holes.

Spencer, Maryland State Open champion, and Leo Walper, Middle Atlantic P. G. A titleholder, will meet Fred McLeod, Columbia professional and Robert T. Barrett, Chevy Chase, on Sunday at Beaver Dam in an exhibition, with the public invited.

Bruns Meets Londos At Griffith Stadium

JIMMY LONDOS.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Whipped up to a frothy frenzy over the recent defeat, Jim Londos lacked on his otherwise commendable mat record in their last meeting two weeks ago, youthful Bobby Bruns, the Chicago cookie, traipses into Griffith Stadium tonight to try and square matters with his venerable opponent.

Their bout headlines a well-balanced card, and 'tis rumored it will be a shooting match. That means only guns, knives and "Cyclone" Burns' shirt will be barred as weapons. It's every man for himself, including the irate customers who inhabit the front row pews.

Bruns has announced he intends to rip up Londos like an old love letter, and Gentleman Jimmy vows he'll tear Master Bob limb from limb and toss him to Joe Turner's hound dogs. Come what may it promises to be a lively session and the winner figures to get a shot at one or both champions of the rival circuits later in the season.

Bruns, a novice of a mere 500 engagements, is currently a pretty hot number in this sector and it's no trade secret that the promoter would like to see him astride Londos' ageing carcass at the finish. Turner regards Bruns as nothing less than a four-leaf clover in his business, and wants to keep him around—just for luck.

But Londos, modestly billing himself as the world's international, Lackawanna & Delaware champion (and finny on any stray territory he overlooked) has a habit of ruining even the best laid plans

Bee Barrett, And Pat Berg Are Winners

Minneapolis Girls Show Field Some Great Golf in Open.

By the Associated Press.

Colorado Springs, Colo., June 15.—Smiling Helen Hicks Harb lost her chance of fighting on to a second straight Women's Western Open Golf title, going down to defeat today in a tense 20-holes second-round battle at mountain-walled Broadmoor.

Mrs. Harb, who was married four months ago to Whitney Harb, of Little Rock, Ark., was beaten by Beatrice Barrett, of Minneapolis.

On the final three greens both girls showed the strain of the duel, missing easy putts, until finally Miss Barrett ran down one of three feet or so on the 464-yard second extra hole for a par 5 and victory.

After the Minnesotan holed this putt, the defending champion tapped one of about the same length at the cup, but it refused to drop.

However, if the tournament lost its champion, it still had its medalist and one of its most popular figures—carrot-topped Patty Berg, of Minneapolis.

The 20-year-old trans-Mississippi champion fired a marvelous 75, two under par, against Broadmoor's wiles and a lusty breeze driving in from the plains to the southeast to eliminate pretty Mrs. Charles Newbold, of Wichita, Kans., a stubborn foe, 2 up.

Patty Needed her great round, which included four birdies, as Mrs. Newbold shot a commendable 78.

Babe Didrikson, the terrific driver from Beaumont, Tex., who is well thought-of by the galleries, played her poorest golf since coming out to the mountains—going nine over par—but outlasted Betty Botterill of Salt Lake City for a 3-and-1 triumph.

Another Salt Lake City contender, black-haired Helen Hofmann, had to score birdie 4's on the rugged seventeenth and eighteenth holes to put out Mrs. H. O. Romadka, of Rochester, Minn., 2 up.

Mrs. Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City, who has won this tournament twice and was runnerup for the trans-Mississippi last week, went only one over par for a 4-and-3 win over Mrs. E. R. Hury, good-looking San Antonio, Tex., blonde.

these days, and may put a blight on Turner's hopes by pinning Bruns. James isn't what he used to be in the mat game, but enough is left of the old champion to beat back the challenges of young upstarts such as Bruns. That's his story, anyway.

But Londos had both hands full the last time he met up with his younger adversary, and 999 out of the 1,000 fans who saw that bout swear Referee Benny Bortnick conspired to hand him the palm. Jimmy had Bruns by both legs, standing him on his head and shoving him around like an old trunk. Then he maneuvered Bruns' shoulders onto the canvas, and before the amazed fans could raise an outcry Bortnick had muscled into the picture and uttered the fatal "Tree."

Bruns wanted a re-match right then and there, but Londos hoofed it to the showers with the mob hot on his heels. The customers stood around for a while, calling him vile names and daring him to show his face, but Jim felt more comfortable inside. Said customers said they'd get him the next time—which is tonight. Maybe they will.

In the semifinal Orville Brown tangles with Chief Thunderbird, and this match may steal the show. The remainder of the program includes Fred Grubmeier vs. Frenchy LaRue; Rudy Kay vs. Ivan Vacturoff, and Boris Demitroff vs. Jake Patterson.

Four Nats merit points in the Man of the Month Contest despite yesterday's defeat at Cleveland.

To Ken Chase, three points, because he pitched a tolerable game despite the fact he was the losing pitcher, and because he contributed three hits to the Nats' attack.

To Al Simmons, three points, because he made two vital hits, drove in two runs, and was robbed of a hit on the longest drive of the game, his liner to left-center which Averill caught with two on base in the eighth.

To George Case, three points because he singled and tripled and twice attempted to launch batting rallies for the Nats.

To Ossie Bluege, one point, because he played a spectacular game in the field and contributed a single toward the run that tied the score in the fourth inning.

Down Through the Heavyweights

Big Jess Willard Wins Heavyweight Title

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Whether Jess Willard felled Jack Johnson in their championship bout at Havana, April 5, 1915, or Johnson obligingly slumped to the canvas of his own volition will rank as one of boxing's most turbulent questions of all times. It remains today the most mysterious, the most provocative issue of the century, compared with which the famed Tunney-Dempsey long count at Chicago is mild, inconsequential matter.

The title, nevertheless, changed hands that afternoon when the elephantine Willard clumped a right hook against his opponent's jaw and was credited with a knockout in the twenty-sixth round. Johnson, according to all newspaper reports of the affair, was comfortably ahead on points when stretched.

A blazing sun beamed down on the perspiring combatants, and as Johnson fell, his head lying halfway out of the ring, he raised one hand to protect his eyes from the sun's glare. Critics of the bout seized on this as proof of their contention that the fight was not strictly according to Hoyle.

Johnson later boasted of receiving $60,000 for his services, after the promoter publicly stated he would be paid $30,000. At the end of the twenty-fifth round Johnson's wife left the Arena. One report said Johnson knew he couldn't last against the giant Willard and didn't want her to see him beaten. Another quite different version was that she was handed the last half of Johnson's purse just before the round opened and signaled him to that effect.

At any rate, the rumor spread that Johnson had agreed to "tank it" for 60 grand but threatened to win the fight unless the full sum was delivered during is progress. He wanted insurance. Willard received only training expenses for his efforts.

Willard, a Carnera-like person, amiable and not blessed with a fighting temperament, was hailed as one of the greatest heavyweights in history after the bout, so great was the crowd's hysteria.

record for last-minute swaps by announcing the West-Almada deal.

Rated as one of the all-time greats of ground-covering, West will strengthen the Nat's batting attack, that despite the presence of six gardeners, is well down in the averages.

West batted .328 last year while Almada, who served over half the season with the Red Sox, had an average of .295. The former has a life-time batting average of over .300, while Almada's is .276.

Almada has captured the fancy of the local fans during his year's stay here with his sensational catches, each rated as "greater" than the preceding one, and despite his low stick mark his presence was tolerated in the outfield by the runs he cut off by his hit-robbing tactics.

The fans of the '26 to '32 era, however, also remember West as the peer of fielders over the past decade, although he has slowed up during his four years with the Browns.

The greatest difference in the trade apparently lies in the ages, with Almada having some 15 years ahead of him, while West is in the veteran class.

West will join the team in Detroit for Friday's contest with the Tigers.

No-Hitters Not New To Vander Meer

Paterson, N. J., June 15 (AP).—Pitching no-hit, no-run games is no novelty to Johnny Vander Meer who hurled his second in succession in the big leagues tonight.

Back in the sandlots of Paterson hardly more than five years ago the speedy left hander twirled five in a season.

And it seems that when Johnny's hot, nothing can stop him, because during that season he pitched three straight no-hitters.

His friends here are not too surprised that their young hero made baseball history tonight. Witness what Bob Whiting, Paterson Morning Call assistant sports editor, wrote in his column yesterday:

"Watch Johnny Vander Meer repeat his no-hit, no-run game. And don't be too surprised if he does it tomorrow night at Brooklyn to reward his Midland Park and local fans, who will give him a 'day' along with a number of gifts."

Tobin Hurls, Bucs Blank Giants, 2-0

Pirate Youngster Gives 5 Hits; Only 3 Losers Reach Second.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 15.—Young Jim Tobin handcuffed the Giants with five hits today and handed the National League champions their fifth shoutout defeat of the year by pitching the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 2 to 0 victory over the New Yorkers.

The defeat left the Giants' National League lead at two games, since the second-place Chicago Cubs also were defeated.

Only three Giants got as far as second base, and only one passed that station as Tobin bested Cliff Melton in a pitchers' duel. Melton gave up the first Pirate run, in the seventh, and Dick Coffman, who pitched the ninth frame, was tagged for the other. Altogether, the Bucs collected only seven hits off their combined pitching, but four of these contributed to the scoring.

It was Tobin's fourth victory of the season, and Melton's fourth setback.

Gus Suhr's double, starting the seventh, and Al Todd's single gave the Pirates their first run. Coffman started the ninth after Melton was lifted for a pinch-hitter and was greeted by Arky Vaughan's single. Suhr singled him to third, and Johnny Rizzo's long fly brought him home.

Bees Blank Cubs By 2 to 0 Count.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 15.—Deacon Danny MacFayden gave up five hits, all singles, today as he pitched the Bees to a 2 to 0 shutout victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Not a Cub passed first base as Danny won his sixth victory against two defeats for the year. He fanned three and walked only one.

The Bees also collected only five hits off Clay Bryant and Charley Root, but four of these counted in their scoring innings. Ray Mueller's single in the second drove the first run across, and Debs Garms batted in the other with a base hit in the fifth.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Modern Play Supplants Classic As Next for Tallulah Bankhead

Lili Hatvany and Zoe Akins Collaborate on Vehicle to Open on Coast; That Law Again; Director Ford Gets Going; Notes of the Theater.

IN CONTRADICTION of more or less prevalent rumors that Tallulah Bankhead has been contemplating another fling at Shakespeare, despite her unhappy experience in "Anthony and Cleopatra," word comes from Claude P. Greneker, right arm of the Shuberts, to the effect that the buoyant Miss Bankhead's next play, following her engagement with Grace George in "The Circle," will be "I Am Different," by Lili Hatvany and Zoe Akins.

BELL.

She will be presented by Lee Shubert, in association with Joseph M. Gaites, who jointly produced "Reflected Glory," in which the daughter of the Speaker of the House appeared season before last.

Present plans call for a West Coast production in August, with a San Francisco opening and the Broadway premiere considerably later, which suggests that the Messrs. Shubert and Gaites have torn a page from the Lunts' book. It will be recalled that this was the procedure that was followed in the case of "Amphitryon 38," in which Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne now are enjoying a successful engagement in London.

Miss Bankhead will be supported in "I Am Different" by John Emery, her husband, last seen in Washington in Katherine Dayton's comedy of kings and dictators, "Save Me the Waltz," in which, incidentally, Miss Bankhead did not appear, although she was in Washington throughout the engagement and attended every performance of the play that week. To date, no further casting has been done.

This new Bankhead vehicle will be the second play on which Miss Akins and Miss Hatvany have collaborated, the other having been "The Love Duel."

Since Tallulah Bankhead is almost a "native daughter," many Washingtonians will harbor the hope that "I Am Different" will stop off for a week at the National on its way from the Golden Gate to the Hudson River.

• • • •

And speaking of the Hudson River reminds me that Edmund Plohn, the Beau Brummel of E street—who manages the National Theater between costume changes—spent last week in New York on a combination business and pleasure trip. What the business was is none of mine, but for the pleasure part of the jaunt, Mr. Plohn attended one Broadway stage hit because he knew in advance he never would have a chance to see it on his own home grounds. That play was "On Borrowed Time" and the reason it will not be seen in the National Capital is that Dudley Digges' costar in the piece is one Peter Holden.

Master Peter Holden, as you probably know, is a 7-year-old juvenile actor, whose appearance on a local stage would be barred under the operation of the District's peculiarly ill-judged and inequitable child labor law. This furnishes just one more instance in which that crazy statute bans from Washington one of the most highly lauded plays of the New York season, presumably on the assumption that Master Holden is being kicked around by his associates and subjected to all manner of mental, moral and physical disintegration. In the interest of reason and simple justice, there ought to be a law against the child labor law.

• • • •

Since we set down a few hundred ill-chosen words here yesterday concerning the "Dead End" kids in "Crime School," coming to the Earle tomorrow, you ought to know that Billy Halop, the toughest one of the gang, with the nicest name, "Frankie," has been signed to a long-term contract by the Warner Brothers. All six of these young screen hoodlums now hold term agreements with the Warners, which is a consummation sometimes described as nice going.

Billy's first assignment under the new piece of paper will be to an important role in "Angels With Dirty Faces," scheduled to go into production within the next fortnight, with Jimmy Cagney and Pat O'Brien costarred. Humphrey Bogart, who has appeared with the juvenile toughies in both "Dead End" and "Crime School," also is down for a featured part in the new flicker.

• • • •

John Ford—"The Iron Horse," "Arrowsmith," "The Post Patrol," "Mary of Scotland," "The Prisoner of Shark Island," etc. etc.—now one of Twentieth Century-Fox's ace directors, arrived at the U. S. Naval Academy, at Annapolis, Md., yesterday to start shooting for the forthcoming picture, "Splinter Fleet." He was accompanied, so Arthur A. De Titta, of the Fox Movietone News, tells me, by a staff of 12 assistant directors, cameramen, technical advisers and the like. They expect to be at the Academy for about two weeks.

What! No beautiful glamor girls and collar-ad boys to keep the Academy grounds clogged with visiting Washingtonians over the fortnight?

• • • •

Now that that "glamor girl" business finally has come up, if you are one of the feminine gender pigmented in the manner gentlemen are said to prefer, and if you attend Loew's Capitol tomorrow to see "Blockade," you may get yourself all pinned up with a free "Madeleine Carroll gardenia."

Through the co-operation of Gude Brothers, the Capitol management will present the first 200 blondes to attend Friday's performance with one of these gardenias—a gesture in compliment to the beauty of the Wanger star whose name they bear for this occasion.

• • • •

I am told by those in a position to know that Tuesday night's performance of "Sweeney Todd," out at the Roadside Theater, ran like a piece of well-oiled machinery, with the final curtain coming down at 11:10. It seems that all the trouble that first night was with the trick barber's chair that tosses its victims into oblivion. The thing wouldn't work and that was that—all a matter of heavy counterweights, varying hefts of the occupants and one thing and another. So they threw out the first chair and built a second—while the curtain was held. Mr. Todd's customers now are being hurled into eternity with neatness and dispatch.

That problem out of the way, the Roadsiders now are at work on their second production of the season, "Plot and Passion," a "high drama," by Tom Taylor, author of "Our American Cousin," one of last season's Roadside hits and the play that was being presented in Ford's Opera House on Tenth street the night President Lincoln was assassinated by John Wilkes Booth. Mr. Taylor reveals a complete change of pace in this one.

Kenyon Nicholson's three-act play of carnival life, "The Barker," has been chosen by the Wilson Windjammers, directed by Forney Reese, as their offering for the second summer Festival program, to be given Tuesday, June 28, at 8 p. m., in the National Sylvan Theater on the Monument Grounds. It will be preceded by a half-hour concert by the U. S. Navy Band.

This will be recalled as the play in which Walter Huston and Claudette Colbert starred on the stage and which, later, was filmed with the late Milton Sills in the title part. The name role will be played in the Windjammers' production by Buck Barbee, local football and baseball star.

If you can stand one more item about "Blockade," that man you will see do the sleight-of-hand tricks in one of the scenes is Peter Godfrey, noted British stage director, imported to Hollywood to direct dialogue for Walter Wanger. At one time, he was London's favorite conjurer. Needing a man to do card tricks in one sequence, Director William Dieterle induced Godfrey to don character makeup and become an actor again. So now you know.

Actor Kisses Star 12 Times for Take

A screen role that consisted of kissing Norma Shearer 12 times in a scene for "Marie Antoinette" was played by Hollywood's luckiest actor.

He is Eddy Conrad, New York stage and radio comedian, who was selected for the part of Sancho in the picture.

Conrad's role required him to speak three lines of dialogue, but more important, to kiss Miss Shearer as she struggled to make her way through a gay crowd during the filming of the Artsist's Ball sequence.

Calls Gable 'Name,' Tot Gets Film Role

Because she called Clark Gable "Big American Chump," 7-year-old Lily Mui now has a nice film role with Gable and Myrna Loy in "Too Hot to Handle."

Director Jack Conway was testing several Chinese children for a role in the new picture when he asked Lily Mui if she knew who Clark Gable was.

"Sure, Big American Chump," said Lily Mui.

New Pictures Feature Next Week's Bills

"Blockade," Walter Wanger's powerful anti-war film, will be the chief screen feature at Loew's Capitol Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The principal roles are played by Madeleine Carroll and Henry Fonda, snupported by Leo Carrillo, John Halliday, Reginald Denny, Vladimir Sokoloff, Robert Warwick, William Davidson, Katherine De Mille, Fred Kohler and others. The scene of the drama is laid in Spain with the current civil war as background. The film is rigidly nonpartisan and devotes itself to the indictment of all war, rather than any single, localized conflict at arms. It is well acted and spectacularly produced. The stage portion of the Capitol's new bill will be headlined by Paul Draper, one of the foremost of American male dancers. Numerous other acts will be included in the program.

The "Dead End" kids and Humphrey Bogart are the foremost players in "Crime School," the new First National production, which will be the major feature of the screen bill at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Gale Page and Weldon Heyburn lead the support. The story is one of incorrigible youth in our large cities and embodies a bold attack on methods employed in our institutions of correction. The picture represents a deft combination of comedy, melodrama and sociology and provides engrossing, if slightly grim, entertainment, with the six tough kids the real stars. On the stage, the bill will be headlined by Gene Krupa and his orchestra, making their first appearance in Washington. Irene Day, "swing" singer, and Leo Watson, "scat" singer, are the band's specialists. Other acts will include Nichols and Roberts, "king and queen of the shag," and Tommy Trent and his "Puppet Parade."

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of Erich Maria Remarque's story of "Three Comrades," with Robert Taylor, Franchot Tone, Robert Young and Margaret Sullavan in the pivotal roles, will continue for a second week at Loew's Palace, beginning tomorrow. The plot is built around the experiences of three young war veterans trying to reorient themselves in a strange world. The short subjects also will be continued.

"The Adventures of Rogin Hood" today completes its final downtown week at the Metropolitan Theater. It will be followed tomorrow by a repeat engagement of "Holiday," Columbia's film version of the Philip Barry stage play, with Katharine Hepburn and Cary Grant in the costellar roles, supported by Doris Nolan, Lew Ayres, Edward Everett Horton and Jean Dixon. Short subjects and composite newsreel will complete the bill.

At Loew's Columbia Theater, for the week beginning tomorrow, Bing Crosby, Beatrice Lillie, Mary Carlisle and their supporting players will resume their downtown run in Paramount's production of "Dr. Rhythm," one of the most amusing and tuneful of the Crosby vehicles. The plot is based on an O. Henry story. Foremost among the supplementaries will be Chapter No. 10 of "The Lone Ranger" and "What Price Safety?"

"The Road to Mexico," a travelogue with Lowell Thomas as commentator; "Fascinating Adventure," a Grantland Rice "Spotlight," and Walt Disney "Donald Buck" cartoon comedy, will comprise the outstanding features of the new bill at the Trans-Lux Theater, beginning tomorrow. The program will be based on complete newsreel coverage of the world.

A double-feature comedy bill of revivals is announced for the week beginning Sunday at the Little Theater. The major attractions will be "If I Had a Million," in which a long list of Paramount stars appear, and "Horsefeathers," one of the MarxBrothers' most hilarious the Marx Brothers' most hilarious mented by the customry short-reel subjects and picturized news events.

The Roadside Theater will continue the presentation of "Sweeney Todd, or the Demon Barber of Fleet Street," its opening bill of the season, throughout the remainder of this week and all of next. This ancient melodrama is interpreted by a cast headed by Anne Ives, Carl Cristianson, Howard Wierum, Lansing Hall, Maurice Jarvis and numerous others.

Tom Gentry's Orchestra, with Jeanne Carroll as songstress, will complete its engagement in the Spanish Garden Ballroom at Glen Echo Park on Saturday night of this week, to be followed next Monday night by Larry Funk and his dance band. In the meantime, the Crystal Pool, World Cruise and the 50-odd other amusement devices at the free admission amusement center are in full operation.

The steamship Potomac, of the Potomac River Line, will make its first cruise to Colonial Beach on Sunday, leaving the Seventh street dock at 9 a. m., and returning to the Capital at 7:30 p. m. A sufficient stopover is made at the beach to permit bathing, fishing and picnicking. The Potomac will leave its berth again at 8:45 p. m. for the regular moonlight cruise.

The Wilson Line's steamship City of Washington continues to carry large crowds of "trippers" daily to Mount Vernon and at night on its moonlight cruises down the Potomac and back. On the evening trips a stop is made at Marshall Hall Park, Washington's only riverfront playground, where many new attractions have been installed this season, including a new speed motorboat in which short trips may be made at as high as 40 miles an hour.

The Post's New Yorker — By LEONARD LYONS

PURSUANT TO CONFIDENTIAL orders from his superiors, Dr. Karl Bowman, director of the psychiatric department at Bellevue, has instructed his staff never to testify for the defense in any criminal case where a question of mentality is concerned . . . District Attorney Dewey, questioning one Tammany leader in connection with the Jimmy Hines case, asked him what interest he had in the nomination of William C. Dodge for district attorney. "None," the leader informed. "In fact, Dodge arranged to fire two of my men before he got into office" . . . Natalie Bodanya, of the Metropolitan Opera, who just married Prof. William Gorman, rejected an M-G-M contract the same day.

MRS. ELEANOR ROOSEVELT dined with her daughter and son-in-law yesterday and wired Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., to join them at dinner . . . "I'm sorry," her telegram added, "but you can't join us later at the show. We're seeing 'I'd Rather Be Right Than an Angel.'"

• • • •

GOV. LEHMAN has indicated that before he'd agree to accept another nomination there must be a cleanup in Tammany . . . Theater owners who want to exhibit a revival of the movie "Hell's Angels" are being told that the Hays office doesn't approve—because of the title.

BRUNO JAENICKE is Toscanini's favorite French-horn player and was a member of the Philharmonic when the maestro conducted . . . Jaenicke now plays with the orchestra at "The Two Bouquets." Yesterday he went to a dentist to have two teeth drilled . . . "Now this is going to be very painful," the dentist warned, "so I'd better give you some novocaine." Jaenicke refused and preferred, instead, to submit to the pain . . . "Any wind-instrument player who calls himself an artist," the patient explained, "must refuse novocaine on the day of a performance. Novocaine deadens the lips, and so the music isn't as good."

B. A. ROLFE'S new vaudevision—wherein recorded music, projected from a screen, furnishes the accompaniment for vaudeville actors onstage—proved so successful in its Middletown tryouts that the Musicians Union will register its opposition to this new enterprise . . . Mady Christians played the last performance of "Heartbreak House"—although she just had received word of her mother's death in Germany . . . Mrs. James J. Walker yesterday introduced two ladies: "Mrs. Westbrook Pegler—I'd like you to meet Mrs. Roy Howard" . . . If a new radio chain is announced shortly, Elliott Roosevelt probably will be its head.

GOV. PHIL LA FOLLETTE arrived in town last night and was questioned about his platform for his Progressive Party . . . "The question of civil liberties is very important," he stated, "and I believe in free speech—but that's not the most important thing. Jobs for unemployed are more important" . . . "We in the East," he was asked, "want to know just what you stand for that Roosevelt doesn't stand for?" La Follette replied: "I'm sick of the East. It has many talkers, but no doers. Action must come from the West" . . . "And how does LaGuardia fit in?" Wisconsin's Governor was asked . . . He shrugged and answered: "Who knows?"

In Hollywood — With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., June 15.—Universal imported one of the most delectable, dainty, desirable bits of femininity I've seen in a long time—Danielle Darrieux—who came through in a big way in "The Rage of Paris." And, given the proper build-up, she'll be the rage of America. Her accent is quaint. Unlike a lot of importations, you understand every word she says. I saw her first in the French picture, "Mayerling," and was crazy about her then—hoping she'd lose none of her charm when we went to work on her. She hasn't.

HEDDA HOPPER

I sat back, relaxed and enjoyed myself. It's also one of the best things Doug, jr., has done.

Mischa Auer romped home, as he always does. When I think of the years he was wasted on hideous heavies—and there are hundreds here today doing the same thing—I should think our producers would feel embarrassed. Don't have to say much about Helen Broderick—she's above criticism. Louis Hayward has great charm as a lover.

It's gratifying to hear that the biggest burst of applause was for deposed head of Universal, Charlie Rogers.

And a treat for the eye to see Joan Bennett with her daughter—almost as tall as Joan—at the preview.

I hope it's true that Lela Rogers will marry J. Edgar Hoover. It would be a grand combination. They've known each other a long time. The Courtney Ryley Coopers are Lela's best friends, also Hoover's. Lela and the Coopers did special press work for the Marines during the war. And Lela still looks like Ginger Rogers' sister.

Hollywood is shocked at the sudden divorce of Luise Rainer and Clifford Odets, two definite, powerful personalities. Now we know why little Luise has been suffering so much. She's tried her utmost to combine her career and happiness with his. The struggle was beyond her—and her only thought now is not to hurt him.

Whatever anyone says about Warner Brothers, we must admit that they have given greater opportunities to young players than any other studio. Now they're handing John Garfield—who's done one picture—the part of George Gershwin in the story of his life. And Gale Page, who's been in "Crime School," "Doctor Cltiterhouse" and "Sister Act," has been given a three-week vacation with pay. When she returns she'll play another lead opposite Eddie Robinson.

The reason Warners won't sell "Desert Song" to Metro is because they've signed two newcomers, undoubtedly star material—Donald Dickson, from the Metropolitan Opera, and Florence George.

If you see an actor hanging around a set when he's not working, it usually means love. Doug, jr., and Paulette Goddard were doing a scene in the London Zoo with three penguins, at Selznick's, and couldn't keep Roland Young away. He has a rare collection of those birds. The set was in an uproar when the leading penguin started to battle his stand-in, made of wood. Before they could stop him he'd eaten off most of the paint.

Buddy Schulberg has checked out from Selznick studio. He was a junior writer. Selznick makes so few pictures and Buddy, all of 23, says he's too old to wait a year to get his name on the screen. He has sold nine original stories in the last six months.

Wheat Prices Advance With Heavy Trading

Profit-Taking Proves a Handicap to 2⅜ Cents Rise.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 15.—Big trading, surpassing any witnessed in months, accompanied 2⅜ cents new jump of wheat prices today, but later this gain was more than wiped out.

Despite wholesale reductions of winter crop estimates, together with continued reports of black rust menace increased, profit-taking on advances proved to be a greater handicap than the day's peak values could withstand for at least the time being. Temptation to turn profits into cash was emphasized by the fact that there had been about 15 cents a bushel rise from the season's low point reached two weeks ago.

At the close, Chicago's wheat futures were unchanged to ½ cent lower compared with yesterday's finish, July 80⅛-¼, September 81-81⅛, corn unchanged to ¾ down, July 57⅛-¼, September 58¾-½, oats ¼ cent off, rye at ⅛ decline to ½ cent advance, and provisions varying from 2 cents setback to 5 cents bulge.

Brokerage Firm Announces Closing

Chicago, June 15 (AP).—Russell, Brewster & Co., Chicago's oldest stock and bond brokerage house, announced today it was retiring from business on June 30. The firm was founded in 1872, the year after the Chicago fire, and was the first Chicago brokerage house to acquire a membership in the New York Stock Exchange.

Walter S. Brewster, son of the company's founder and one of the principal partners, said the firm was dissolving because "we can't foresee a future for the business in the near term." Brewster is 60 years old and the other senior partner, Edward P. Russell, is 80.

Ayres Predicts Further Lows For Business

Reversal of Downtrend Unlikely in View of Continued Drop.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, June 15.—Col. Leonard P. Ayers expressed gloom today about business prospects.

"The decline in the volume of industrial production since last August is already the most severe that we have ever experienced within the space of time that this one has been under way," the economist said.

"It will probably prove to be the longest one without a reversal that we have ever had.

"Slow persistent decline has continued to be the chief characteristic of general business activity during the second quarter of this year, as it was in the first quarter," he wrote in the Cleveland Trust Co.'s monthly business review.

"During the four last months of 1937 business activity dropped with almost unprecedented rapidity, and by the beginning of this year it had reached a kind of depression floor.

"That floor has proved during the first six months of this year not to be a level one, but rather a downward tilting one. So far there have been no convincing indications that it is even leveling out."

Col. Ayres said business recovery will start when national income begins to increase, which will happen when industrial pay rolls begin to expand. "The pay-roll figures will grow larger when there is a distinct increase in the production of durable goods," he said, "and probably the change will be first noted in an important increase in the output of iron and steel."

Col. Ayres summarized industrial production as about 34 per cent lower in the first half of 1938, compared with last year; railroad freight 28 per cent down; the number of automobiles 57 per cent off; steel production 63 per cent lower; new building construction 20 per cent down, and industrial profits off about 68 per cent.

Interstate Building Declares Dividend

At the regular monthly meeting, the directors of Interstate Building Association yesterday declared a semiannual dividend to all shareholders at the rate of 4 per cent per annum.

The payment will be credited to the shareholders' accounts as of June 30. Secretary Edward K. Jones announced that assets are now at a record high and it is expected that the $2,000,000 mark will be reached.

Stocks Close Slightly Higher in Light Trading Day; Railroad Bonds Decline.

New York, June 15.—Plagues push 'em up for commodities, as did the black rust menace for a period during today's big market in the wheat pit, but the many plagues which continue to infest Wall Street do not even have this one saving grace. Neither wheat or stocks maintained an even course throughout the session, former losing through profit taking and the latter overcoming early irregularity sufficiently to show an average gain of about ⅛ point.

But in this process of veering about the spotlight was monopolized by the above staple at the expense of the New York market, for trading in the Chicago pit was the largest in months and a sharp run-up of 2⅜ cents a bushel, based on the spread of the above plague and reductions in winter wheat estimates, was completely nullified by selling by those who were anxious to take profits. They have seen wheat climb 15 cents from the season's lows of about two weeks ago. The close was unchanged to ½ cent lower.

Trading Continue Light.

On the other hand the stock exchange had no more to offer than another desultory day in which 344,620 shares changed hands and in which the vast majority of fluctuations were of the fractional variety. Sad to state, this is a normal volume for recent months, but it is about a fourth of what the brokerage fraternity would like to consider normal. Only a handful of the leaders displayed any marked inclination to get far away from Tuesday's closing levels.

Stocks and bonds of the railroads declined when the prolonged fight to get a relief measure through this session of Congress was abandoned. The senior obligations suffered more than the junior securities. Aviation issues were steady, as were the rubber and farm implement securities. Metals did far better than one would expect from a casual glance at the monthly report of domestic and foreign production and consumption of copper.

International Nickel Active.

International Nickel was the day's most active stock and it added a small fraction. MacIntyre Porcupine Mines led the gold division, which was the recipient of more buying, based on the new outbreak of hoarding and the persistent rumor of a further devaluation of the American dollar. Dome Mines added a point, while Alaska Juneau and Homestake carried plus signs at the close.

South American Gold and Platinum, rarely seen in the list of most active stocks, ranked next to International Nickel in point of volume, but of course it is one of the lower bracket issues. National Biscuit was a feature, selling at a new high for the year following declaration of the regular dividend. Bethlehem and United States Steel were down small amounts, Chrysler and General Motors were little changed, Douglas Aircraft reflects some profit taking and Texas led the oils with a half point gain. Less active but stronger was Standard of New Jersey, which added 1½.

Dollar Recovers.

The dollar enjoyed a partial recovery after its weak session Tuesday but there was no change in the rumors of devaluation, which have been officially denied in Washington. In fact the reports are beginning to affect the Government bond market, which was off slightly, as dealers tried to figure out what the Government may do next. Hopes for a general world-wide stabilization are voiced in connection with the visit of Ambassador Kennedy, but the Street must be content with hopes, not actual knowledge of what he will discuss with the President.

Rail Bonds Decline.

Railroad bonds slipped sharply lower in the listed market today, as it became clear that Congress would pass no rail-aid legislation in its few remaining hours. Previous lows were exceeded in numerous instances, since the fear is now that bankruptcies will increase. Other speculative bonds were irregular in a dull market. United States Government issues drifted downward on the mounting talk of dollar devaluation, and foreign dollar bonds were irregular. Turnover was $4,580,000.

The low-priced interest payers were hardest hit among the carrier bonds. Issues of roads like New York Central, Southern Pacific and Nickle Plate showed losses to 3 points. The borderline rails dropped some more, and some lines even of carriers like Union Pacific, Atchison and Pennsylvania were off.

Telephone bonds and best rated power and light operating issues held their ground, as money market obligations. Nor were the leading industrials much affected. Among the special groups, International Telephone bonds advanced, with the 4½s due next year at best levels in many months, owing to the belief that the financing problems will be solved. Local tractions, speculative commodity bonds and other groups remained dull.

Devaluation Rumors.

United States Treasury issues were marked slightly lower, almost entirely on nervousness regarding devaluation rumors. The losses ranged only to 4-32 point, and the price structure thus was virtually unchanged. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations likewise were a little easier. In counter trading the demand for short term Treasury notes and bills slackened, but prices were well maintained.

Japanese bonds resumed their decline in the foreign section, with some issues again approaching the lows. Italian issues were better and Czech bonds improved on the better European political atmosphere. The high grade foreigns were quiet and motionless. Both European and Latin-American default bonds were irregular.

Union Pacific Bonds Dip $10 in Large Deal

New York, June 15 (AP).—One of the largest single transactions on the listed bond market in months was recorded shortly before noon today, when 100 bonds of $1,000 par value each of the Union Pacific Railroad changed hands at $1,092.50 each, a drop of $10 per bond from Tuesday's close.

The issue involved was the company's first 4s, due in 1947.

Steel Output Advances to 26% Capacity

Improvement Not Expected to Continue All Summer.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 15.—The steel industry finds itself in a "more cheerful" position this week than last, with June business running slightly ahead of May and operations at the Nation's steel mills averaging a point higher at 26 per cent, Iron Age said today in its weekly survey of the industry.

"Evidence pointing to any considerable run-up in steel mill operations this summer is scanty, yet prospects for the structural steel business are brightening," the publication said. "The auto industry, contrary to expectations, is now planning to operate most of the summer, and steel sellers report a more diversified demand for many steel products."

Activity Increasing.

Most of the principal steel-producing centers are more active than a week ago, it was pointed out. The Pittsburgh rate is up 4 points at 22 per cent, Chicago up ½ point at 23½ per cent, Cleveland and Youngstown up 1 point each at 23 per cent, and Buffalo up 7 points to 29½.

"More encouraging than the dull summer now in prospect for steel is a longer-range view into the fall months, when the shipbuilding and construction industries, aided by Government funds, will get into fuller swing and other important outlets for steel become more active," the report added.

PWA Requirements.

"The new PWA program is expected to take $90,000,000 worth of steel, with the first orders to be placed in several months; 78,000 tons of steel will be required for 21 naval ships the Maritime Commission expects to contract for within six months, and the Navy's billion-dollar expansion program is expected to require 108,750 tons of plates 36,990 tons of shapes and 7,580 tons of bars."

Gold Buying Wave Starts Inflation Talk

New York, June 13 (AP).—The largest gold purchases of the year in the London market today—presumably for hoarding purposes—whipped up a fresh flurry of inflation gossip in Wall Street today, and prompted a brief wave of buying of so-called "inflation" shares, such as gold mining stocks.

The movement quickly subsided, however, as speculative quarters considered the various denials in Washington lately that further devaluation of the dollar was planned. The gossip in speculative circles generally dealt with the trip home which Joseph P. Kennedy, American Ambassador to Great Britain, is making, and the possibility that some new international currency alignment may be under consideration.

Grain Mart Retains Present Closing Time

Chicago, June 15 (AP).—Board of trade members today defeated a proposed amendment to the rules which would have extended the market's closing time from 12:15 p. m. (Central standard time) to 1 p. m. The vote, one of the largest in the grain exchange's history, was 547 to 403.

The exchange has observed its present closing time since September 19, 1888.

Wilkie Wants Fair U.S. Policy For Utilities

Primary Purpose Is to Protect Investors Interests.

By the Associated Press.

Wilmington, Del., June 15.—Wendell L. Wilkie, president of the Commonwealth and Southern Corporation, declared at a stockholders' meeting today that the Federal Government should be fair in its policy toward utilities.

"Buy our properties," he said. "Don't raid us.

"Investors have put their money in our properties, in good faith and under public regulations. We realize that the Federal Government can fight us. It has more money and more strength. But in its TVA and WPA program, we appeal again to the Government to buy our properties in the areas where the TVA operates but agree not to go beyond the lines into the balance of the territories."

Wilkie said negotiations between the Government officials and the company for the properties in the TVA territory had been finished, and a conference was held earlier this week with TVA Director David Lilienthal. However, Wilkie did not disclose the subject of the conference.

Wilkie disclosed, however, he has suggested that the Government agree not to go beyond the lines of the areas served by the companies it purchases. The stockholders, representing 19,785,530 shares, unanimously re-elected the board of directors.

How to Torture Your Wife.

WHEN MRS. BLEMISH SAID IT WAS TOO WARM TO WEAR A COAT, AND SUGGESTED THAT I TAKE MINE OFF, I TOOK HER AT HER WORD. WHAT'S WRONG ABOUT WEARIN' SUSPENDERS? YOU AFRAID THOSE HIGHTONED FOLKS MIGHT FAINT AT TH' SIGHT OF 'EM? WELL, I CAN'T SEE BUT WHAT THEY'RE AS RESPECTABLE AS A BELT

Bob Burns Says—

I hear a lot of men complainin' about their wives bein' back-seat drivers, but I want to tell you there's many a man that wouldn't "amount to a continental" if he didn't have one of those wives to tell him which way to turn.

I knew a man who worked for the same firm for 15 years and never got a raise in salary and he never asked for one; but finally he got married. His wife wasn't a back-seat driver—she sat right up in front where she could grab the wheel.

She kept tellin' him what to tell the boss until finally one night he came home and he says, "'Well, I finally told the boss what you told me." She says, "Well, that's swell—I'm proud of you." He says, "Well, thank you, my dear—now hand me that 'want ad' section."

The Hecht Co.'s 'Sell Now' Plan
SAVES YOU 23% to 40%

$1,000,000 Liquidation Sale

Manufacturer's Surplus Stock
Furniture and Bedding

Including thousands of dollars' worth of hand-picked merchandise from our own stocks—sacrificed in price to meet the new low levels of the "Sell Now" Plan

The Hecht Co. decided that it was time for action—no more waiting for business to get better of itself—but clear-cut decisive action that would start the wheels of industry turning again—by stimulating production and putting people back to work! This is the first step—the turning over of a great warehouse to the liquidation of surplus stocks of important American manufacturers. This event is without precedent. It is so huge that our own store is not big enough to house it. For that reason we are staging it in our warehouse.

One to Three Weeks Delivery

We are able to show only sample pieces, of which these manufacturers are holding vast stocks of identical merchandise—ready for shipment direct from the factory. And in every case the sample is plainly marked to show the quantity of goods available—at the factory—whether one or a thousand.

When you make your purchase from the sample, we will order the merchandise immediately! The factory will ship identical pieces to The Hecht Co. within one to three weeks, and we will make inspection and delivery to your home in the usual manner. Arrangements may be made for later delivery of furniture and bedding if you so decide.

No Money Down
1 to 2 Years to Pay on the Hecht Co. Liberal Home Budget Plan—
Special Facilities at the Warehouse for Opening Budget Accounts

Any "Trinidad" Bus will take you to Our Warehouse. All other buses and street cars will transfer you FREE to "Trinidad" Buses

Any bus marked "Trinidad" will take you to our warehouse by a special extension of regular service . . . and any other bus or street car will transfer you without charge to a Trinidad Bus.

When you return, the same courtesies will be again extended to you . . . and you pay only one fare for each full trip.
